FRENCH FRANCS dropped to 2 cents yesterday, Italian lire to $3.20 a hundred, Belgian francs, in spite of the King's new, extraordinary power, were weak. American financiers fear a serious drop in some European bonds. That might disturb this market. Invest your money at home.

WINSTON CHURCHILL says that while we lent England four billions, Britain spent seven billions here for war purposes.

That may be, but it was Britain's war; she spent the money to save her own life.

Our European friends do not like us, but will get over it. The important thing is to keep out of FURTHER European complications, remembering the French proverb: "Good accounts make good friends."

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, what chance do you think Uncle Sam would have NOW, before the World Court?

FOR WEEKS, the Rev. Walter Wynn of Great Britain has predicted "some thing impregnant in the world's history" to happen yesterday, July 20. The most important thing that could happen now, in Europe, would be the discovery of a lump of gold, as big as a fair-sized apartment house, that could be used to pay Europe's debts, and let all nations start over again.

MERCIFUL LITTLE GIRLS PRAY AT EDIE'S LONELY GRAVE

It has remained for these two merciful little girls—innocent of all knowledge of the sordid side of life that swept Edie Greene in its pitiless vortex to a death of agony—to set an example to those who besmirch the character of the dead. They visited the grave of the forlorn victim of things that should not be and placed flowers there and offered prayers for the repose of her soul. "One prayer from the lips of such as these is greater before the Judgment Seat than all the supplications of the temple," wrote Palgrave.

Weather Forecast for New England—Showers and thunder storms tonight; much cooler tomorrow.

As the casualty toll swelled to seven deaths and eight prostrations, New England weather achieved a new heat record today by rising to the unprecedented July 21 figure of 97.

The mark was reached shortly after three o'clock, the temperature being the hottest for this date in the history of the local weather bureau.

In 1894 the official thermometers registered a maximum of 95 and in 193 reached 94 on July 21.

FALLS 35 FEET.

The latest prostrations reported were Leo Chadon, forty-seven, of No. 47 Ellington street, Dorchester, who was taken from in front of No. 884 Washington street to the City Hospital, and Valfried Ekstrand, twenty-six, of No. 60 Minden street, Roxbury.

Ekstrand was painting a house at No. 28 Ramsey street, Dorchester, when he was stricken by the heat and fell 35 feet to the ground from

DR. HANSON, BAIL CUT, TAKES TRAIN FOR HUB

Dr. J. Leo Hanson, whose skilled hand is alleged to have taken part in the dissecting of the corpse of Edith Louise Greene, victim of an illegal operation, started for Boston today to "face the music."

Overnight he is free and he began the journey here from New York accompanied only by his attorney, Robert M. McGaulley, and a reporter for the Boston Evening American. His arraignment here is scheduled for tomorrow.

Hanson was released on $1,000 bail in the Court of General Sessions,

CHICAGO LANDS DEMPSEY FIGHT

Chicago, Ill., July 21.—Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney will fight in Chicago on September 12, Tex Rickard, announced today.

Rickard declared both Dempsey and Tunney had agreed to fight and that final articles of agreement would be signed in Chicago early in August.

Details of the amounts to be paid Dempsey and Tunney were not made public.

The New York promoter said a statement covering all details of the match would be issued late today or tomorrow.

"The only thing that can stop this bout," Rickard told International News Service, 'is the refusal of the approval of the Illinois Commission. I believes the commission will approve the fight. There is no reason why they should not."

NEW ANTI-AMERICAN RIOTS BREAK IN PARIS

Paris, July 21.—Minister of Finance de Monzie told the Chamber he feared the Bank of France would be compelled to suspend payments tomorrow.

Stocks in Wall Street, which had rallied smartly after earlier selling outbreaks until all the earmarks of a new big upswing were in evidence, broke sharply on this Paris announcement. Leading active issues, like General Motors and U. S. Steel, sacrificed their gains in short order.

Paris, July 21 (I.N.S.).—American sightseers on a bus en route to Montmartre were attacked today by about 100 residents who, it is claimed, resented the loud talk of the visitors.

The Americans fought back and were holding their own fairly well when the police arrived.

Passengers in another bus also were booed and hissed, a crowd, reminding the tourists of the attack in the open-air restaurant atop the Montmartre yesterday, calling out "You'll receive the same reception as yesterday."

The police are taking all precautions to prevent disorder. Police detachments around the Stock Ex change and the Elysees Palace have

WOMAN KILLED IN CAR CRASH

Mrs. James Malloy of No. 8 Gloucester street, Back Bay, was killed almost instantly today when she was hurled beneath her automobile after it had collided with the car driven by Harry Davis of Franklin, at Riverway and Brookline avenue.

Davis was arrested on the charge of manslaughter.

Mrs. Malloy was driving the car owned by her husband along the Riverway as Davis drove along Brookline avenue. At the junction the two cars collided.

Mrs. Malloy's machine was thrown into the air by the force of the collision and she was pinned beneath it after it had turned turtle.

She was drawn from the wreckage and hurried to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, but was pronounced dead at the hospital.

GIRL WHO KISSED AND TOLD SUED FOR $50,000

Mansfield, July 21.—"The girl who kissed and told" is today defendant in a $50,000 suit for slander, brought against her by Max Seiden, prominent local merchant, who, the girl said, exacted a kiss from her as payment for an automobile ride.

Also Charles W. Stearns, another local merchant, is defendant in a like suit for a like amount, on the ground that he posted a notice in his store to the effect that Seiden had "attacked" the girl in question.

The girl who it is charged told is Miss Laura Herchuck, seventeen, a stinging. He was taken to the City Hospital suffering from a fractured right foot, lacerated right knee and multiple contusions.

While most of the West suffered from sizzling heat, temperatures up to 108 being reported, Denver experienced a drop of 34 degrees, with still further drops expected.

RELIEF PROMISED.

Two deaths in Chicago brought to more than two score the number of fatalities attributed to the heat since Monday. In southern Illinois and Nebraska corn was reported in danger from drouth and heat.

Showers and thunderstorms were predicted for all parts of the Middle West and New England tonight, followed by lower temperatures.

Among victims were Mrs. Caroline M. Underwood, 92, of No. 945 Moody street, Waltham, who died in her home, and Robert O'Connell, 19, of No. 17 Collett Hill, Somerville, overcome near the North Station and taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital.

While the official mercury climbed accompanied by excessive humidity, fortunate persons fled to the sanctuary of seashore and country, while in the cities energies flagged and suffering humanity struggled for breath.

MAYOR FIGHTS FOR RELIEF.

Mayor Malcolm F. Nichols closed City Hall, and ordered every hose reducing device in the city into action.

By his instructions the North End and Marine Park piers will remain open all night, and women and children will be permitted to ride free on the ferries.

Additional benches were to be placed on the Charlestown, Dover street and Broadway bridges, so that mothers and infants from the crowded sections of the city might get the benefit of whatever breeze there was.

Hydrant sprinklers in all parks and playgrounds will be in operation day and night, and 11 the recreation centres were ordered thrown open to the public with permission to sit or sleep on the grass.

BIG FACTORIES CLOSE.

As the mercury continued to rise, soaring above the high mark of 97 yesterday, reports began to come in of factories, stores and offices being closed and their employes sent home for the day.

With thermometers registering 90 degrees in the shade before noon at Springfield the H. B. Smith Company foundries in Westfield and at the A. G. Spaulding & Brothers factory in Chicopee were closed.

New Haven cities reported temperatures of from 95 to 98 unofficially, but up to noon no deaths or serious prostrations had been noted.

Governor Alvan T. Fuller sent a telegram to Major-General Edward L. Logan at Camp Devens, stating if he wished to abbreviate somewhat the Governor's review of the 26th Division, there would be no objection.

According to the official weather report, considerable relief may be expected tomorrow. The official forecast read:

Partly cloudy, probably local thunder showers tonight and Thursday. Slightly cooler in north portion of New England tonight. Much cooler Thursday and Thursday night. Fresh to strong southwest winds shifting to northwest.

At 1 o'clock today a new record for the year was reached when the official thermometer on top of the Federal Building gave a reading of 93, two degrees better than yesterday's maximum.

DROPS IN STREET.

Another prostration was that of Frank H. Donnell of No. 22 Waverly street, Melrose, overcome while driving a furniture truck through Maplewood square, Malden.

Becoming faint, he stopped the truck, killed the engine and then fell unconscious to the street. Miss Florence Bennett of No. 10 Park street, Cliftondale, a trained nurse, who was passing, administered first aid and Donnell was taken to the Melrose Hospital.

Boston was the hottest large city in the country, and no relief was promised by the weather man other than possible showers this afternoon.

The latest victims were:

Francis Green, 32, of No. 187 F street, South Boston, overcome at Washington and Grove streets, Forest Hills Hospital.

Miss Mary Deasy, 24, of Elmwood avenue, West Lynn, overcome on Dudley street, near Vine street, Roxbury. City Hospital.

Ernest McLoud, 64 Lambert avenue, Roxbury, drowned in Butterfield's Pond, Lexington.

Philip Santoncito, 26 Hale street, Fitchburg, in Simonds Pond, Fitchburg.

Lawrence LeBlanc, six, Franklin, N. H., in Merrimac River.

Donald Brooks, 14, St. Albans, Vt., in Missisquoi River, Richford, Vt.

Leonard Ruggles, 17, 153 Gartland street, Everett, and Bryant Stewart, 17, of Berlin, N. H., were drowned at Lake Abenaki, the Balsams, N. H., late Monday night, the bodies being recovered yesterday at daylight.

Ellen C. Murray, 10, of 8 Longwood terrace, Boston, drowned Monday at Marshfield. Her body was found yesterday.

At no time during the night did the official mercury reading show below 76, and as a result suffering was great in the crowded sections of the city.

8 Dead as Torrid Heat Wave Sweeps Arizona

Yuma, Ariz., July 21 (I.N.S.).—Eight deaths were traced directly to the heat wave in this district when a Mexican and a Greek, unconscious upon the tracks of the Southern Pacific Railroad, were killed by the flyer "Argonaut." The men, according to police, were overcome by the heat while walking along the tracks in the desert. Guy Simpson, Southern Pacific engineer, died at a hospital.

Vermont Swelters, but Farmers Are Delighted

St. Albans, Vt., July 21 (A.P.).—Northern Vermont today experienced the hottest day of the Summer. The thermometer here registered 75 degrees at 8 o'clock and at 10 o'clock it was 90 degrees. The hot weather is acceptable to north county farmers, who are in the midst of haying.

Pennsylvania in Grip of 94-Degree Wave

Philadelphia, July 21 (A.P.)—The highest temperature of the present heat wave was predicted for today by the Weather Bureau. Philadelphia was a little cooler than most cities in Pennsylvania early today, but a high heat wave came across the Alleghenies and was spreading along the Atlantic seaboard. At 11 a. m. the temperature in Philadelphia was 91 degrees. Up-State points reported the mercury as high as 94 before noon.

Albany, N. Y., July 21 (A.P.).—Summer's hottest wave threatened to engulf Albany and Eastern New York today.

With reports of excessive temperatures in the West and indications the wave is traveling East rapidly, predictions the mercury would soar over the previous high mark of 92 were made at the local weather bureau. Since sunrise the temperature has climbed past 81 degrees. Excessive humidity added to the distress.

FIND LOVE NOTE OF DEAD GIRL

A letter in which she said her father "was wild for a while, but he is all right now" was written by Lillian McCullough of Waltham, second illegal surgery victim, the State police revealed today, when the letter came to their hands.

The letter was written by the Waltham girl to her sweetheart, Richard King, twenty-one, Waltham watch factory worker and father of two children, on July 1, while Lillian was at Scituate for a day.

The letter expressed lonesomeness and was signed "with lots of love."

Under arrest in connection with Lillian's tragic death are King, Dr. James P. A. Nolan of Brookline and Mrs. Abbie A. Graham, in whose house in Moody street, Waltham, the alleged surgery was performed, police say.

The Waltham police today were considering arrest of a second doctor and another woman in connection with the death of Miss McCullough.

The wheels of justice were spun into action by District Attorney Alfred K. Reading of Middlesex County, who promised to present all the evidence, as soon as it is gathered, to the September session of the grand jury.

State Officers O'Neil and Sherlock, attached to the district attorney's office, were placed on the case immediately and promised further arrests within a few hours.

King, it is understood, had planned to marry Miss McCullough. He was on a vacation to his native home in Amherst, N. S. when the girl was stricken and arrived in Waltham a day or two before she died.

'EDIE' GREENE LAID TO REST WITH SECRET FUNERAL

New York city, after Assistant District Attorney Maloney of Manhattan declared he had firm faith in McGauley's promise to take Hanson direct to Boston. Judge McIntyre reduced bail from $25,000 to the lower figure and Magistrate Jean Norris, the woman judge who set the high bail, agreed to the change.

HEAVY STRAIN.

The strain of the two days that have elapsed since his arrest quickly vanished from the young doctor's face, and he walked out of the court house with jaunty step and smiling countenance, confidently ordering his counsel to wire District Attorney O'Brien that "we'll be there."

There was no relaxation today in the investigation of the case of the dismembered State ward and a South End taxi driver was grilled twice today, making four times he has been before the district attorney.

BURIAL OF EDITH.

While the investigation of the cardboard box tragedy goes on, with six persons now under arrest, a mound of freshly turned earth in the $25 section of Mt. Benedict Cemetery, West Roxbury, bears mute evidence of the secret burial of "Edie" Greene, the victim in the case.

Purchased by the State despite continued pleas by her former sweetheart, James Vincent Ford, that he be allowed to buy a lot in New Calvary Cemetery and provide a fitting funeral, the barren lot in the Field of St. Mary was selected as the proper repository for the earthly remains of the unfortunate love victim.

A plain casket, in a rough box of wood, encases the body.

The State stepped in and planned the funeral of "Edie" Green hurriedly. At the very moment that counsel for young Ford, who is under indictment as an accessory in connection with her death, was seeking permission to pay a fitting tribute, officials were conducting the funeral from a South End undertaker's shop to Mount Benedict.

Two women investigators, the undertaker, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maz of Dorchester were the only mourners. Ford was not notified of the State's plans.

Within three hours after decision to conduct the funeral was made by officials the grave had been dug, the casket had been lowered, and the earth placed over the box.

The Lord's Prayer and three "Ave Marias" constituted the commitment prayers. There were no pall bearers in the strange funeral services which marked the last earthly tribute to "Edie" Greene.

Family of Dr. Hanson Sure He Is Innocent

By JOHN H. NOONAN.

New York, July 21.—Mrs. Edith Hanson, pretty twenty-four-year-old wife of Dr. J. Lee Hanson, arrived here today from her home in Philadelphia, in company with Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith, mother and stepfather of the youthful surgeon, held in default of $15,000 bail, which was placed by Judge Jean Norris when he was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Magistrates' Court.

When the prisoner's relatives arrived here they readily announced to the Boston Evening American reporter that they had the utmost faith in Dr. Hanson's innocence. Mrs. Smith said they were first apprised of the doctor's predicament when they read the newspapers in Philadelphia while returning to their home at No. 2205 Somerset street after spending the day at an outing.

"My son never could have had anything to do with the death of Edith Greene. He has a spotless reputation in his profession and has lived up to the ethics of the medical world every day of his life," said Mrs. Smith.

"We are here to arrange bonds for the doctor so that he may return to Massachusetts voluntarily and cleared his name of this stigma, and we will immediately be in a position then to show the injustice and persecution heaped upon the doctor's shoulders," announced the prisoner's wife vehemently.

Mrs. A. J. Smith, the doctor's mother, clinging to the arm of her daughter-in-law, arrived at the corner of Franklin and Center streets and stood silent for a moment, although abashed by the grim walls of Manhattan's prison. They approached the portals and were forced to wait for several moments until the guard at the iron wicket had summoned his superior and told him their errand.

The prisoner's relatives greeted him affectionately and, within a few minutes after their arrival, the youthful physician, in his suave manner, reassured his wife and mother that he was entirely innocent of the grave accusations made by the complainant in the Massachusetts court.

The Girl Who Never Had a Chance

—By Paul Whelton—

CHAPTER III.

As the "breaks" come in the game of life, so is life lived; so is it measured in success and so is it measured in failure—the whole to be balanced at its end, weighed and the sum total filed in the archives of human existence . . . so soon to be forgotten.

Striving, struggling, straining—a long reach toward fulfillment of a hope; success within the grasp. Then the "breaks!" the faintest turn of a hair; a wrong move; misplaced word; the flicker of a lash. Down, down, down, with all achievement lost again.

Yet, some the "breaks" advance. The difference and decision lie in the pain of Fate.

From the tremulous lips of a Boston girl, the life of Edith Louise Greene, "The Girl Who Never Had a Chance," is sketched in brief words, from the moment of its inception in a Winchester boarding house to the early struggling hours of a July Sunday morning when the first faint streaks of dawn were ascending up toward the horizon and when the feeble spark that still glowed in Edith's body was sinking lower and lower as she lay under the pall of death in a doctor's office in Washington street.

JINX FOLLOWED HER.

"Things seemed always to go wrong with Edith; there was always a jinx connected with most everything she attempted to do."

She lost the "breaks" those indefinable circumstances that spell defeat or that spell disaster.

Born without the presence of a father; left without the love of a mother; bereft of the home and family life that is the right and heritage of every child—Edith Greene was a daughter of charity, a girl who walked alone even while in the home and company of good and kindly benefactors.

Such were the Mays of South Boston, husband and wife, with whom Edith made her home for a matter of ten years.

Motherly, kindly, strict and with a tight hand when necessity dictated, Mrs. May was the nearest approach to a mother that Edith could have had during those formative years of her tragic life.

WELL TRAINED IN VAIN.

They trained her in the ways of the church; they directed her feet in the way they should go; they established upon her the love and affection which would have been the seed of their own child, had the home been blessed with one.

Valiantly the Mays built up the bulwarks, but they were building in frailty against the overwhelming weight of circumstance that was to destroy even this gesture at a chance for Edith Greene.

In St. Eulalia's Parochial School of South Boston, the orphaned girl was entered by Mrs. May to be trained and instructed by the soft-voiced nuns, who teach not only of the worldly and material, but of the spiritual and the soul.

Spelling and the story of the world; figures and the mercy of God, beyond whose sight not even a sparrow falls; writing and the sacrifice made by the Son for mankind—reading and the story of the Magdalene and the stones.

Long, dreary hours, amid the droning voices, while the motes danced effinly in the streaming sun.

SHE STUDIED MUSIC.

Days when the myriad star-forms of snowflakes spatted on the panes and chill winds whistled and shrilled in the cornices of the nunnery, where a prim little girl, stiff-starched, pigtailed, bewilderedly "ump-tumped" on a piano in exacting, even cadence—"One, two, three four—one, two three four."

Progress, and pieces and vague, starry thoughts in tune with the tick of the metronome.

The full-habited nuns taught Edith her music; then recognizing a decided pianist, through whose fingers the light and shadow of laughter flowed to the keys of ivory and ebony like some electric current ever-gleaming within the tiny body.

Promotion, home-lessons, long walks "after school" when the lunch rose was put away and the chalklines of the hop-scotch on the walk had scuffed out under feet that swarmed.

LIFE OF INNOCENCE.

Skating and coasting in the season, breath-taking plunges into the cooling sea washing the strand before the home of the Mays, jibing with the boys—innocence, life, love and laughter.

There was Bessie Trask to play with—though that is not her name. Bessie, the first girl who had not questioned her painfully regarding the strange condition of guardianship by some vague thing called "The State."

On the walk of Columbia road the friendship was made when Edith shared her bag of crackers with Bessie and they devoured them: "One for me and one for you; and the one over—why you get half and me half."—ingrammatically.

There was no place in the true friendship for grammar.

Then, suddenly, Edith was ten and eleven and even twelve—age of strange, dreamy stirrings, that age when a girl lapses sometimes into the first feelings of self-consciousness—or, in the other direction, boldness.

NEEDED MOTHER LOVE.

Edith Louise Greene, child of the State, was shy. The big, brown eyes, soft and round, sombre in the shadow of the long, curving lashes, drooped where they had roved restlessly, glowed where they had twinkled and snapped—those eyes of which, above all other features of her, you were first conscious.

It was the time for a mother's love more than any previous time; hour for a parent's close, understanding companionship, moment for wise counsel by the sad-eyed woman, long gone, whose place even kindly Mrs. May could not fill at such a turning.

Moods—which she did not understand herself and which frightened her sometimes. Broodings because of trivialities. Rebellion within at despised tasks, housework, dusting, the unending parade of soiled dishes, metamorphosized into soapy dishes

FIND GIRL STUNNED IN ROAD

Worcester Miss Tells of a Roadhouse Quarrel With Dentist

Worcester, July 21.—A party at Lunt's roadhouse in Sterling, a quarrel between herself and Dr. Elmer T. Nordlander, prominent local dentist, and then forgetfulness, was the incoherent story sobbed out to police inspectors today at Worcester City Hospital by pretty Florence E. Berlin, found unconscious on the Sterling road.

The girl is badly injured and shaken, and the police believe she must have been thrown from an automobile. Her eyes are blackened and there are various bruises about her body.

The girl told the police she lives at No. 6 Jacques avenue, Worcester, and for several months had been keeping company with the dentist, who has offices at No. 390 Main street. She said they went to the roadhouse together and there were drinks.

She remembered only a quarrel, she told Police Inspectors Swan and Murphy, and knew nothing more until she came to herself in the hospital.

The dentist was told of the girl's condition and he immediately hurried to the hospital, where he was questioned by the detectives at the girl's bedside.

Nordlander admitted they had quarreled at the roadhouse. He said the girl had joined a party of four young men, introduced herself to them, and danced with them.

The dentist believed she left the place with them.

In any event, he said, she did not leave with him, nor he reached his home shortly after midnight, some four hours before she was found in the roadway.

The police placed no charge against the dentist, but said the girl can bring an assault charge if she wishes.

She Is Safe

MISSING 5 WEEKS

Grace Copeland of Salisbury Plains is reported found in the vicinity of Fairlee, Vt.

COPELAND GIRL FOUND SAFE

Fairlee, Vt., July 21 (A.P.)—Grace Isabelle Copeland, twenty-year-old Normal School graduate, who was reported missing last night at her home in Salisbury Plains, Mass., is safe in this vicinity, Sheriff W. H. French of Lyme declared today.

The girl was reported to have dropped out of sight the day after her graduation from the Framingham State Normal School on June 17, and it was said two boxes of her belongings were unclaimed at a Boston express office.

The sheriff said that he would interview the girl later in the day and would communicate with her family.

GRIFFIN GETS A YEAR AND DAY

A suspended sentence of a year and a day in Plymouth Jail was passed by Judge Lowell in Federal District Court today on Walter P. Griffin, who pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with embezzlement of $2,110 from the Citizens' National Bank of Boston.

Counsel for Griffin told the court that complete restitution of the amount involved had been made and his statement was followed by the recommendation of Assistant U. S. Attorney E. P. McCormick that the defendant be leniently dealt with.

Griffin, who lives in Somerville, will be required to make a monthly report to the probation officer of that city until the expiration of the suspended sentence.

B. & M. TO JUNK MAINE LINE

Washington, July 21 (A.P.)—The Boston & Maine Railroad was authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to abandon its Kennebunkport branch, a short line serving a Summer resort territory in York county.

The parent company claimed the line was built primarily for Summer business, but that most of this travel is now by automobile.

The commission asserted no representations were received from hotel or resort owners or Summer residents there, indicating that these interests were indifferent to the question.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION FILED BY MALDEN MILLS

Four Greater Boston banks, with claims totaling $95,000, are secured creditors of the Cub Knitting Mills of Malden, formerly the Yale Knitting Company, which filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in Federal District Court today listing liabilities of $349,336 and asserts of $297,537.

On promissory notes, the Malden Trust Company claims $36,000; the Second National Bank of Malden, $19,000; the State Street Trust Company, $23,000, and the Newton Trust Company, $15,000. Of the assets listed by the bankrupt firm, $52,000 is said to be the value of its real estate holdings. Cash on hand is listed as $61.47.

JOHN J. KIRWIN IS BURIED IN ST. JOSEPH'S

Funeral services for John J. Kirwin, long an usher at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross and known to clergymen all over the country, were held today at the Cathedral. Solemn requiem mass was celebrated at 9 o'clock by the Rev. Neil A. Cronin, administrator. The Rev. William A. Dacey was the deacon and the Rev. William B. Fogg the subdeacon.

The pallbearers included John J. Power, Daniel Woods, Frank Cruise, Thomas Hagerty, Joseph MacDonald and William McKenna. Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

MEXICANS PROTEST EDICT

Chief Opposition to Church Ban Is Seen Among the Wealthy and Indians

Mexico City, July 21 (A.P.).—Opposition to the new religious regulations is being manifested in two contrasted reactions—first, among the wealthiest people in society circles, and, second, among the poorest of the Indian families.

The Indians, alarmed over reports that all churches may be closed, are swarming into Catholic churches and having their infants baptized and their elder children confirmed.

A great increase is reported in the number of adult worshippers at all masses, and also in the number of individuals seen praying in the churches. A large percentage of these worshippers are Indians.

SOCIETY ON "STRIKE."

Meanwhile, there is another picture among the most prominent persons in society circles. Beautiful women are reclining invitations to balls or are refusing to dance if they attend. They make the plea that their fellow Catholics are in distress and it is incumbent upon them to avoid pleasure as much as possible.

At a ball given in the American Embassy by James R. Sheffield, the Ambassador, certain high Mexican families did not attend for that reason.

Meetings for the discussion of procedure under the religious regulations are being held by the Knights of Columbus, the Catholic Women's League, the Young Men's Association and the National League in Defence of Religious Freedom.

U. S. PLANS NO ACTION IN MEDEIROS CASE

Washington, July 21 (I.N.S.).—Unless a formal request is received from the Portuguese government, there is little likelihood any action will be taken by the State Department to seek clemency for Celeste Medeiros, convicted of murder in New Bedford, Mass., it was declared at the Department today.

Thus far, the Portuguese minister has made only informal representations in behalf of Medeiros. If a request is received from Lisbon, it probably would be referred to the governor of Massachusetts for action.

Stars Doomed Edie to 'Love Fate,' Horoscope Reveals

EYES INDICATE A CAPACITY FOR DEEP EMOTION
WELL SHAPED NOSE SHOWS REFINEMENT
MOUTH and CHIN INDICATE A MAGNETIC PERSUASIVE POWER.
4 A.M. Oct. 21, 1907 Winchester Mass.

Two students of character from different viewpoints show that the elements and to some extent natural tendencies put other obstacles in the straight and narrow path for Edie Green, the girl who found so many obstacles in her way.

Edna M. Blake, teacher of astrology and astronomy, said that she had never seen a horoscope so ill-omened as that of the unfortunate girl.

Jessie Semple, phrenologist, finds that the girl's eyes showed the deep emotion that probably led her astray. Said Mrs. Blake:

"Born with the Sun and Moon in exact opposition, afflicted by the square of Mars, which also opposed Jupiter, the planet of benevolence, and squared by Venus, the planet of love; she could gratify her emotions only at the cost of her life, and even then in vain; for the Moon, planet of fecundity, placed on the cusp of the house of death, was disposed of by Mars, who cast his baneful rays from the house ruling offspring, destroying mother and child.

"Uranus in the fourth house denotes a sudden end, and opposing Neptune in the house of honor, that her death would be attended by scandal and notoriety.

"The only good aspects in the chart are those affecting her mental qualities and attributes.

"She was artistic, and had a fertile imagination, talent for music or painting, intense emotions, and love of beauty and harmony, of grace and symmetry; with an attractive, magnetic personality that gained her many friends.

"Bright, quick and animated, fond of grandeur and great undertakings, desirous of gaining knowledge, and generous to excess; craving culture and refinement, meticulously neat, and shrinking from laborious and unclean work; desirous to express herself through her talents, and yearning for luxuries, adornment, and dainty possessions, she was forced to be content with these to a limited extent, for Jupiter was in adverse aspect with Venus; and Saturn, planet of sorrow and privation, placed in the house of labor and dis-ease, balked her on every hand, and forced her to cope with circumstances over which she had no control.

"Through the influence of the good aspect between Saturn and Mercury, she had a good mentality, good memory and a contemplative mind.

"Impulse, pride and anger caused many extremes and she had a hasty, fiery temper, though not lasting.

"She was outspoken, assertive, combative and defensive; brave, but headstrong; the desire being for liberty and freedom of expression.

"She was a good reasoner, however; often taking an unexpected and original viewpoint; and in argument was logical and convincing, although inclined to be abrupt and sarcastic.

"The evidences of the immediate cause of death testify to a shock, caused by an operation, and affecting the heart action."

Said Miss Semple:

"An examination of the head and face of Edith Louise Green shows a girl of bright intelligence. She has a well shaped nose that indicates that she was a girl of refinement. The mouth and chin show magnetic persuasive power to lead and rule.

"Always kind and dignified. The eyes show inclination to deep emotion, but not demonstrative, and a faculty of smiling when heart or head might be worried."

GIRL COMMITS SUICIDE BY GAS

Using illuminating gas, Miss Louis N. Brown, 25, committed suicide today in the home of Mrs. Charles B. Somers, No. 128 Lowell avenue, Newtonville, where she had been staying for more than a year with her mother.

The girl was found dead on the floor of her bedroom by a member of the Somers family who had smelled gas and investigated.

Although no reason was assigned either by the family or by him, Medical Examiner George A. West declared the girl's death to be suicidal.

B. & M. FLIER IS DERAILED

Concord, N. H., July 21 (A.P.)—The Red Wing, Boston & Maine express, twenty-four hours from Montreal to Boston, was derailed just outside this city early today. Railroad officials said none of the passengers was injured. The train was delayed two hours.

Create Cotton Institute

New York, July 21 (A.P.).—Cotton manufacturers from sixteen States in convention in the Hotel Biltmore today unanimously adopted the report of a special committee creating a cotton-textile institute. The organization is expected to be completed later in the day with the election of officers.

SONS HOLD FATHER IN JAIL FOR MORE MONEY

Mexico City, July 21 (A.P.).—John F. Howard, 72-year-old manufacturer of Haverhill, Mass., who is imprisoned at the Cuernavaca jail on charges of perjury and bigamy preferred by his tow sons, is still deadlocked with his sons on their demands for a settlement on their mother.

The sons, John and Albert, have refused a settlement which their father offered. They say they will not withdraw charges against him until he agrees to their terms. Howard is being held in connection with his getting a Mexican divorce and marrying Mrs. Eleanor B. Phillis of Milwaukee.

NINE KILLED IN MINE BLAST

Blocton, Ala., July 21 (A.P.).—Nine men were killed in a gas explosion at the Dixie Mine of the Moffatt Coal Company at Moffatt, today. The dead include three white miners and six negro workers. Seven of the bodies were removed soon after the explosion.

The men were working a short night shift and every man in the mine at the time of the accident was killed. It was believed by officials that the explosion of a "gas pocket" which occurred at daylight was responsible for the blast.

to be mads sparkling by the towel she hated.

Scullery maidens' tasks—but she did not know then the work—tasks of the every-day girl and ever rebelled or srgued against, never to avail.

Some day! Better things, some day, she thought vaguely. There was kindly consideration at Mrs. May's, but not always would she be with the Mays. But no matter where she might be Edith intended, she told herself firmly, that she would rise above the usual lot of the State ward.

She would do—well, vaguely, she would rise somehow!

Reaching for the stars——!

This is the third instalment of the life story of Edith Louise Greene, "The Girl Who Never Had a Chance." The fourth will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American. Watch for it! Read it! Perhaps some day you may have opportunity to help a girl—another "girl who never had a chance."

MORSE WILL LOSE HIS $20,000 BAIL

New York, July 21 (I.N.S.).—Although his absence means forfeiture of $20,000 bail, Charles W. Morse will not appear in Federal court tomorrow to plead to an indictment charging him with using the mails to defraud investors in the United States Steamship Company.

Trial in the case has been set for October 4. Rockwood asserts Morse will be unable to appear even then.

NORTHAMPTON'S FIRST LUNCHROOM MAN DIES

Northampton, July 21 (A.P.).—Frank W. Woodward, sixty-eight, pioneer lunchroom proprietor in this city and a thirty-second degree Mason, died suddenly at his home. He was born in Ashfield, December 25, 1857, and came here when a small boy. He opened the first lunchroom in Northampton and conducted it for twenty years, retiring in 1918. Mr. Woodward was a Knight Templar a member of Melha Temple and Consistory of Springfield, and also belonged to the Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Grace W. WHY it's always cool at the METROPOLITAN
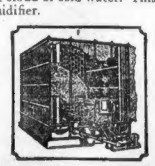
We make our own weather!

Of course, all you care about, is that it's cool, but if you want to know how the most scientific refrigerating plant in the world manufactures ideal climate for us, this is what goes on "behind the scenes."

First we remove the excess moisture

Humidity, as you know, has more to do with your comfort than temperature. So we must first get rid of the muggy moisture in the air—dehumidification.

You have seen the moisture in the air condense on the sides of a pitcher of ice water. We use the same principle. We cool the air until it gives up its excess moisture. To do this, the air which is to enter the theatre is blown through a chamber in which hundreds of small nozzles are each spraying a perfect cloud of cold water. This is the dehumidifier.



When the air is being blown through the sprays of cold water, at least 98% of all dust and foreign matter is removed.

Seven buckets of dirt were taken from such a chamber after one day's operation in cleansing out-door city air. So you see, the air in the theatre, besides being cooler, is much cleaner than the air outside.

From the spray chamber, where the air is cooled and cleaned and where it loses its excess moisture, a great fan forces it through metal ducts to the top of the theatre. From here it is distributed evenly to all parts of the theatre, through openings in the ceiling. The air passes down over the audience so gently that there is no sense of draught.

The theatre is literally filled with ideal climate and so controlled that the temperature in the summer never exceeds seventy-two degrees F. and the relative humidity never exceeds 55%—an ideal condition.

Every hour 25 tons of cool, clean air are poured into the theatre. This means that every particle of air is replaced with a fresh one about every five minutes. That's why it's always cool at ceived a miniature of The Silver Laurel and $250 in gold.

HELEN BLY IS BOSTON GIRL

Miss Rose Ritchie of Auburn street., Boston, is the third Boston Girl of 1926. Her honors are a miniature of The Silver Laurel and $100 in gold.

Miss Bly's golden gown, bringing to her the distinction of choice as first, and the awards offered by The Boston Evening American, was metal cloth. She was charming in a metal cloth dress, with pale silver stockings and silver kid pumps. The costume was most suitable for her coloring and was delightfully youthful.

Over the metal cloth dress she wore a white Spanish shawl with long silk fringe.

The Silver Laurel Wreath, with which she was crowned, added a coincidental touch of completeness to her effective costume.

The Boston Girl of 1926, prepossessing and smartly attired, carries herself with dignity and distinction. Her brown eyes are her striking feature and her hair, which is bobbed, is of an auburn shade. She is employed by the George Batten Advertising Company, 10 State street, and has resided in Boston three years.

Formerly she was a resident of Jamestown, New York, coming to Boston when she was graduated from the Jamestown High School and had completed a post-graduate course of secretarial studies at the Jamestown Business College. She is 23 years of age.

BOTH 19 YEARS OLD.

Miss Brown's attire was a satin dress with broad white and orchid stripes. She wore a red vanbond felt hat, an effective coloring for her costume. White shoes with white chiffon stockings completed her simple, yet effective ensemble. She is one of last year's graduates from the Scituate High School, and has since been employed in the stock record department of the Winslow's Son's Company. She is 19 years of age.

Miss Ritchie wore an outfit well chosen to represent an effective street costume. Her dress is a two-piece flat black crepe trimmed with white silk braid. Her stockings are chiffon and the open pumps black patent leather. Her hat is a smart Parisian model, a "Neapolitan" straw, trimmed with black silk velvet. Her age is also 19 years.

PASS IN REVIEW.

The selection of these three smartly modish girls as the typical Boston Girl of 1926 was the result of two and one-half hours careful consideration by the judges.

With courteous forthought, Mr. Royal Bailey Farnum, director of the Normal Art School, had everything ready for the candidates as they assembled at 2 o'clock in the commodius dressing rooms with mirrors.

The dress parade began half an hour later. Seven attractive and colorful groups of fifteen, in attire running the entire gamut of the mode in style for evening wear, sports afternoon, street and business raiment, stood in succession before the judges. Each girl was considered individually by each judge.

JUDGED TWICE.

Each was viewed with the hat on and with the hat off and each walked alone before the platform. From these thirty were chosen for the semi-final judgment. In groups of ten, the thirty budding prospects repeated the process and twelve were left.

The quest for the Boston Girl of 1926, which the Boston Evening American conducted for a month, presenting smartly attired and prepossessing Greater Boston girls with an interesting opportunity to achieve distinction and substantial awards drew to a close as six of the twelve were eliminated.

The final group included Miss Frances Donoway of the R. H White Company, Miss Martha Dunder of No. 3 Lexington street, Waltham and Miss Gladys Surles of No. 4 Iroquois street, Waltham, and the girls finally chosen.

Style, personality, posture were the factors on which the Boston Girl of 1926 was chosen.

The judges were Mr. L. W. Sargent, president and director of the Sargent School for Physical Education, foremost girl's physical culture authority in the United States; Mr. Raymond Porter, distinguished sculptor and member of the faculty of the Massachusetts Normal Art School; Miss Lucy Park, New York fashion authority and associate editor Harper's Bazaar, and Mr. Royal Bailey Farnum, eminent art authority, director art education, Massachusetts.

CHIEF TELLS OF ARSENAL FIRE

New York, July 21 (A.P.).—Seated in an invalid's chair, his face bruised and a bandage covering one of his eyes, Captain C. C. Dowling, commandant of Lake Denmark, N. J., naval arsenal, today told the naval court of inquiry a dramatic story of the origin of the disaster on July 10 that took a toll of twenty-one lives and caused damage estimated at nearly $30,000,000.

It was a tale of heroism, in which two men, both patients at the naval hospital at Brooklyn, worked with shells exploding all around them to put out fires and prevent further loss of life.

Captain Dowling told how his own life had been saved by Private Castner Kenstck, of the Marines, whose home is in Hamtramck, near Detroit, Mich.

GRANT THREE BUS PERMITS

Certificates for three bus lines were today granted to the Service Bus Company of Revere by the Public Utilities Commission.

The routes are from Revere Beach to North Revere, Point of Pines to Orient Heights, and Revere Beach to Glendale square, Everett.

Operating under a temporary permit, the company has been giving free bus rides while waiting for the permanent certificate, the granting of which was opposed by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway. All three permits carry definite limitations as to what part of the routes are open for picking up and discharging passengers.

Manila, July 20 (A.P.)—Governor-General Leonard Wood's veto of a bill for a plebiscite on the question of independence of the islands from the United States was overridden by the Senate.

IF YOU'RE COOL READ OF FUEL

Washington, July 21 (A.P.)—The New England Governors' Fuel Committee and the Public Utilities Commission of Connecticut filed a motion with the Interstate Commerce Commission today to close that part of its anthracite rate investigation concerning rates on hard coal substitutes from Southern Virginia and West Virginia.

The move was made in an effort to separate that phase of the proceeding from the part covering rates on coal from the Central Pennsylvania fields to New England territory by way of tidewater ports.

So easy now to prevent perspiration odor

Millions know this simple, refreshing way

ALL OF US, whether conscious of it or not, are subject to natural but unpleasant perspiration odor. But now there is such a simple, sensible way to end it—a delightful toilet soap—antiseptic—which doesn't hide the odor—it removes the cause

What a joy on sweltering days, to be able to exercise freely with assurance of lasting daintiness. After your Lifebuoy bath you'll stay as clean smelling as though you hadn't perspired a drop—all day.

A cleanness that safeguards

It isn't just because Lifebuoy kills perspiration odor that it has become the most widely used toilet soap in the world. Millions like it because it's so refreshing, gives such wonderful lather, agrees so well with delicate skin and removes dirt and grime so amazingly

But more than all, Lifebuoy gently removes germs that spread disease. Think of it—escape from perspiration odor plus the safety of antiseptic cleanness, just by using the most satisfying toilet soap you ever tried.

Lifebuoy is so different from other toilet soaps that even its scent is surprising—it's hygienic. Lifebuoy, even without its antiseptic which imparts this scent, would be wonderful toilet soap, but its reasoning health protection and amazing benefit to skin would be lacking.

Proof that it protects

It's not a perfume, but a scent so convincing of safe, absolute cleanness that before you've finished the first cake you will love it just as millions of other users do.

You'll wonder, after Lifebuoy has become a pleasant daily habit, how you were ever satisfied with mere perfumed soaps.

Costs so little

Lifebuoy, valuable as it is, costs no more—probably less than the soap you are now using. Its protection—the all-day daintiness it assures—cost nothing extra—are free.

Get Lifebuoy today. You'll know it by the red box and the orange red color of the cake—the color of its pure palm fruit oil.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Tennis at Longwood and Tedesco Clubs Engaging Society's Attention

OF COURSE TENNIS AT Longwood is society's stronghold the present week while the invitation tourneys go on there with a galaxy of stars of the first magnitude flashing about the courts and a thrilled gallery to applaud.

AND SCARCELY will the Longwood affair be settled before the Seventh Open Tournament for the North Shore championship commences at the Tedesco Club, down at Swampscott.

THUS IS BRILLIANT TENNIS the theme during nearly two weeks in mid-July. For the Tedesco matches some of the younger stars are putting in daily practice, the Palfrey girls among them.

AND IF WOMEN'S matches are played at Longwood surely everyone interested in tennis will have their fill of the sport. And, judging from the gallery at Longwood, society dotes on tennis.

MRS. SHERWIN BADGER (the former Mary Bancroft), was trig in tan silk and tan chapeau as she watched some of the Longwood tennis from a box. The hat was of softest felt, and finished the golden tan ensemble to a nicety.

ALSO IN GOLDEN TAN, Mrs. James Jackson, with one of her young daughters, braved Old Sol's rays to watch some of the Longwood aggregation's brilliant tennis. They've come, these racquet wielders, from the four corners of the earth.

NO TENNIS TOURNEY at Longwood goes on without the A. Winsor-Weld family being well represented. Miss Dorothy Weld in gray silk and sports hat, moved from gallery to gallery as the centre of attraction switched about from inside to outside courts.

THE CHARLES ELLIS MASONS, with their daughter and sons, have gone down from their Exeter street home to Hingham, where they occupy what is perhaps one of Hingham's handsomest old mansions, the Governor Andrew place.

MRS. MASON was Elizabeth Andrew, so the estate is a family heritage of much historic sentimental association. Extensive renovation is just completed, and guests of the Masons are enthusiastic at the results.

DOCKING TODAY in New York, the steamship Paris of the French line brings back from a not long foreign stay Mrs. John N. Ladensach and her daughter, the charming and petite Miss Olga Ladensach.

AS MUCH AT HOME in Continental capitals as in Boston, Mrs. and Miss Ladensach are of that fortunate set which crosses the big pond at frequent intervals. They sailed abroad in early spring.

MOTORING THROUGH England's byways and highways, Mrs. Robert Farley Clark of Chestnut street is making a leisurely pilgrimage. Her itinerary is most extensive, and before she returns to Boston she will have "done" England most thoroughly.

MISS MATILDA HOUGHTON
An American belle in London, where her popularity is a by-word. (I. N. R.)

DIVERSIFIED as well as authentic, Newport's crop of foreign titles is unusually interesting this season. The Countess Alexandra Berolldingen, guest of Miss Emma Stone at her Newport villa, is a titled foreigner now adorning the social scheme.

BARON SELZAR of Washington is also a Stone house guest. Madame Nils de Rudebeck of Sweden has been a distinguished guest in the Vanderbilt menage, "The Breakers." Mrs. William Laimbeer is in Newport.

NEWPORT OF A GENERATION or so ago will recall the light hearted and good-to-look-upon Nathalie Schenck, whose unfortunate matrimonial experience with one Captain Glen Collins is journalistic history.

MARRIAGE WITH WILLIAM LAIMBEER ended tragically several years ago leaving the former Newport belle a widow. Now she's in the City by the Sea as house guest of Mrs. May Brady Harriman.

COOLIDGE MAY PROLONG HIS VACATION

Paul Smiths, N. Y., July 21 (A.P.).—A fortnight of almost complete relaxation in the bracing air of the Adirondacks has so benefited President Coolidge that some of his friends would not be surprised if he prolonged his vacation until Labor Day.

If his good spirits serve as an indication, Mr. Coolidge's enthusiasm for his vacation home at White Pine Camp is increasing.

The climate here, President Coolidge finds, is much the same as that of his own Vermont hills. He regards the fishing as better than in the streams and lakes of his native State, however.

Guests at the Summer White House are as enthusiastic about the fishing as Mr. Coolidge, although not all of them can boast his luck. Senator Fess, Republican, Ohio, who spent the night at the camp, anticipated an expedition in quest of Lake Osgood pike and bass before his departure today. Secretary of War Davis tested some of the President's favorite spots and found a couple of new bass holes for him.

JURY IGNORES KIDNAP STORY

Los Angeles, July 21 (A.P.).—Another phase of the Aimee Semple McPherson kidnaping investigation has ended with little light thrown on the various mysterious angles of the case as far as the public is concerned.

After an exhaustive inquiry, the Los Angeles county grand jury reported nothing had been found to warrant indictments for kidnaping.

Before making its report, the jury considered blank indictments prepared by Dist. Atty. Asa Keyes against two men and a woman, who, Mrs. McPherson alleged, abducted her and held her for ransom. The jury left the way open for further investigation by announcing it was ready at any time to consider new evidence.

Had the grand jury returned a blanket indictment against the alleged kidnapers the action would have been construed as substantiating the evangelist's story. Attorneys for Mrs. McPherson, however, see a vindication of the evangelist's kidnaping story in the findings of the grand jury.

Killed by Burglars

Winipeg, Man., July 21 (I.N.S.).—John Bolvin, a contractor and brother of Arthur Boivan, a member of the Manitoba Legislature, was found dead in his home here today, the victim of burglars. Police say that Bolvin was killed while resisting robbers who took $1,000 in cash from the dead man.

PARIS CENSORS FRANC RATE

been doubled and uniformed men are on guard at brokers' offices.

The government has already forbidden the announcement by radio of the exchange rate in terms of dollars and pounds sterling, and is considering preventing the rate being posted in the streets of the city.

Franc Rises at Rumors of Drastic Measures to Come

Paris, July 21.—Showing greater power of recovery than it has for almost a fortnight the franc, after opening at 50.05 to the dollar, a low record for all time, had climbed to 46.44 at noon today.

The relative steadiness of the franc is ascribed to the wide-spread belief that something drastic to relieve the French financial chaos would be done before the day was over.

BAND AND DRUM CORPS AT SHRINE SPECTACLE

As an added attraction to the circus and spectacle "America," sponsored by the Aleppo Shrine Temple, the famous shrine band and full complement of their drum corps, comprising nearly 300 skilled musicians, will appear this evening at Braves Field, and again on Friday and Saturday nights.

This is the last week of the engagement of this stupendous outdoor pageant, enlisting the services of 1,000 people, 40 acts, spectacular ballets, horses, elephants and other big features.

Contrary to any rumor there is absolutely no likelihood of extending the engagement beyond next Saturday night, when the farewell performance will be given.

WILINSKY NOW ACTING HEALTH COMMISSIONER

Deputy Health Commissioner Dr. Charles F. Wilinsky, in charge of the child hygiene division of the city health department, is acting Health Commissioner for the balance of the week on account of Health Commissioner Mahoney's forced absence from the city on busines relative to the health department.

4 DRAGGED OUT OF AUTO FIRE

Springfield, July 21.—A Boston man, a Brookline man and a Brookline woman and her daughter were injured severely early today when their heavy brougham crashed into a milk truck in Longmeadow, overturned and caught fire.

The injured, all of whom are at Springfield Hospital are:

JOHN E. BROWN, No. 123 Buckminster road, Brookline.

MRS. EDNA CAMPBELL, No. 10 Orkney road, Brookline.

HELEN CAMPBELL, her daughter, same address.

THEODORE LEE, No. 31 Milk street, Boston.

Just after dawn the party was returning from New York toward Boston. In Longmeadow street, Longmeadow, a suburb, the milk truck was parked beside the road while Frank Knight and William Harwood, both of Longmeadow, were making deliveries.

It is believed the steering gear on the brougham broke. The big car careened into the truck, glanced off, snubbed and turned over on its top.

Flames licked at the trickling gasoline, then roared up around the car.

Knight and Harwood, racing back to their truck, saw the burning brougham, wrenched open the doors and dragged the four injured occupants out. They were rushed to Springfield Hospital, where they were imediately placed in operating rooms.

MILLS CLOSED BY STRIKE OPEN, BUT FEW RETURN

Adams, July 21 (A.P.).—The Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing Company, closed for four weeks by a strike of 2,000 workers, re-opened this morning with only 150 hands back at their old jobs. G. T. Thompson, treasurer, said the plant will remain open this week and continue if sufficient workers reappear but that if they do not it will close Saturday for an indefinite period.

Like new only at first—or all season long?

You can avoid the enemies that destroy their sheen and freshness

You paid at least $15 for your new silk sports dress! Don't let ordinary soaps rob it of its charm, its new look. Just a few cents' worth of Lux keeps silks fresh, unfaded, unyellowed all season long!

Your new chiffon is too precious to trust to ordinary soaps! Never rub with cake soap. Never expose it to flakes and chips containing free alkali. Wash the safest, surest way—the Lux way!

Of course you succumbed to at least one of the new printed chiffons! Who could resist them? So graceful, so lovely! But oh! so perishable!

All the wear you give them doesn't begin to do the damage wrought by improper washing—because of the two enemies of sheer fabrics that are found in ordinary soaps

Never expose chiffons to ordinary washing methods. Ordinary soaps may be fatal to them! When you rub these delicate cobwebby fabrics with a cake of soap the damage is often invisible at first —but your cherished little dresses begin to lose their lovely freshness and look shabby before the season is half over. Repeated rubbing actually destroys the delicate fibres and cuts the life of sheer fabrics in half.

Ordinary chips and flakes containing free alkali are no less harmful! Swiftly, certainly, free alkali destroys the life of the delicate fibres, fades their colors—quickly your chiffons become dowdy, old-looking.

With Lux there is no ruinous rubbing, no harmful free alkali! Lux was created expressly to cleanse and renew the loveliness of dainty fabrics—use it for your chiffons and keep them fresh, unfaded, lovely as the day you bought them! Its bubbling, sparkling suds cleanse gently, with the greatest safety. You know the most delicate fabric safe in pure water alone is safe in Lux! Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

If it's safe in pure water alone it's safe in LUX

ONLY ONE FLINT PLANT SOLD

Automobilists have expressed their enthusiasm over the new model Flint coupe roadster, recently arrived in Boston and now on exhibition at the Flint showroom.

Even the automobile tyro appreciates the beauty of design, while the expert sees in the new car all the qualities that are demanded of first rank automobiles. The car has extra seating capacity and a custom-built body.

On a recent visit to the Flint factory at Flint, Mich., H. L. Bailey, general manager of the Boston Flint Company, Inc., reports a very interesting program for the balance of the fiscal year, made possible by the sale of one of the big plants owned by the Durant interests and located at Flint to the Fisher Body Corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors.

The Fisher Body Corporation will make extensive alterations in the plant to suit the purpose of manufacturing automobile bodies and the Flint Motor Company has completed arrangements for moving its equipment to one of its other five large plants, where the program will be continued for the manufacture of Flint automobiles on a quality basis, rather than the intensive production basis as has been practiced in the moderate priced car field.

ONLY ONE PLANT SOLD.

The entire program has been made possible by the sale of the factory for $4,000,000, which has placed the Flint Motor Company in a position to liquidate all outstanding obligations with an ample reserve capital assuring a financial stability which will insure continued and uninterrupted operations.

The snappy, new Model 40 sport roadster-coupe with extra seating capacity and custom-built body has sprung into instant popularity due to its beauty of design, snappy, luxurious appearance and exceptional road performance.

BIG SAVING IN COSTS.

Mr. Bailey says the Flint has not sold out its business to General Motors and will continue to manufacture Flint cars in their enormous plant located at Elizabeth, N. J., one of the largest and most completely equipped automobile plants in the world, costing $12,000,000 to build.

The transfer of the Flint operations to this new point means there will be great saving in operating costs, at the same time Flint will be served by a greater organization at less expense to itself. With a completely equipped plant, sheet metal and body departments in the plant, the Flint Motor Company will profit by way of economy.

Mr. Bailey further states that the Boston Flint Company has enjoyed a very splendid business for the first six months of 1926 and every indication points towards a successful year.

MID-WEEK MOTOR NEWS

By J. HERBERT DODGE, Automobile Editor

MISS HELEN FORD BUYS ANOTHER

The star of "Dearest Enemy" has purchased a "70" roadster model. It is the second Chrysler she has owned. This new model is on display at the C. E. Fay Company, Boston.

NEW MODEL "SIXTY" HIGHLY PRAISED

The exclusive design and beauty of appearance of this new model has drawn thousands to the showrooms of the Boston Flint Company, Inc. It has extra seating capacity and custom built body.

BIG OUTPUT OF DODGE CARS

Quite as remarkable as the volume of Dodge Brothers business in Boston territory for 1926 is an analysis of the character of this business, just completed for the first six months, by C. E. Henshaw, president of the Henshaw Motor Company, Boston dealers.

"A careful survey shows," says Mr. Henshaw, "that a considerable percentage of all purchasers are first-time buyers or are operating more than one car.

"Consequently, our resale department has not been asked to handle old cars in connection with these sales. This is a very satisfactory condition and a significant one. When there is no old car to discuss, the purchaser usually makes up his mind without prejudice or preposession, chooses according to his judgment and not according to the 'over-allowance' bait that often influences and beclouds the issue. This, we feel, indicates that Dodge Brothers cars have been bought strictly on their merits.

"The so-called 'used car problem,' however, has never been a problem to Dodge Brothers dealers, who are required to handle resale cars strictly as merchandise, which must be sold at the market and which, therefore, must be bought at the market, less cost of selling and reconditioning.

"It has taken eleven years for the soundness of this policy to become thoroughly appreciated throughout the industry. That it has been appreciated by the wise buyer is evidenced by the fact that Dodge Brothers have delivered more than one and three-quarters millions of new cars in less than twelve years."

BUILDING HUGE PONTIAC PLANT

Announcement of the beginning of construction on the new $5,000,000 Pontiac Six factory, a part of Oakland's huge expansion program which will bring its production up among the four largest producers of cars in the world, has been made.

A. J. Brandt, vice-president, in charge of operations, states that this expansion not only doubles the size of the present Oakland factories, but will also double the number of employes about the first of the year, when the new plants will be ready for a production of 1,000 additional cars per day.

The new factory will be the last word in automobile plant construction and equipment. It will embrace three manufacturing units and a power plant. The prodigious size of the first units to be erected may be gleaned from the fact that the largest of the three structures is to be a quarter of a mile long and two stories high, with basement. This means a single unit four city blocks in length. It is to be devoted to the assembly of cars and will have a total floor area of more than 600,000 square feet.

The second unit will be a car storage and shipping department. The building will be 900 feet long and 440 feet wide, with all shipping and receiving docks under cover. The third unit will be devoted entirely to the manufacture of Pontiac Six engines. It will be 700 feet long and 375 feet wide, and will include in its equipment the latest and most advanced machinery.

These buildings are being erected adjacent to the mammoth Fisher Body Corporation plant at Pontiac and close to the present Oakland factory building.

The demand for the Pontiac Six continues to outrun the production ability of Oakland factories each succeeding month, setting a new high volume record for any new make of car during its first year.

BALLOON TIRES ARE SUPERIOR

The biggest question in the mind of every motor owner today is whether a balloon tire will wear as long as its predecessor, the high pressure tire. Everybody, of course, recognizes the advantages of riding comfort and the economy of balloon tires cushioning the mechanism of the car, increasing its life and saving on the repair bills, but Fred Moore of the Goodrich Company says that in their experience balloon tires wear longer.

Recently a heavy sedan on balloon tires drove up to the Goodrich branch with the tires still good for many thousands of additional miles in them although they had already been driven 37,000 miles. A very interesting thing about this mileage was the fact that this car had been driven through 27 different States in the United States.

M'DONALD ASKS FOR MORE SELF-DISCIPLINE IN YOUTH

London, July 21 (A.P.).—More rigid self-discipline was urged upon the youth of today by former Premier J. Tammay MacDonald, addressing a huge throng at the World's Christian Endeavor Convention at the Crystal Palace.

Because of the misery the world was reaping from the sowing of a few years ago, he said, youth required a discipline severer, more drastic and more hardening in spiritual things than had been called for by any generation for a long period. The speech was loudly applauded.

Rev. Ira Landreth, of the American delegation, addressing the meeting on the topic "The Youth of the World for Sobriety," said:

"America deserves her reputation for greatness because, of the many colossal blunders she has committed, but prohibition is not one of them."

MOTHER OF SIX STAYS IN U. S.

Hartford, Ct., July 21 (A.P.)—Perseverance has won American citizenship for Mrs. Mary Petrone, she had to fight for the right and to save herself from deportation and leave six little children behind.

Once she was a citizen because her father had been naturalized. Then she lost her standing by marrying a man from her native Italy. She induced her husband to become a citizen in 1923, but during the wait for his final papers a new law barred the wife of an alien from taking citizenship with her husband.

Petrone died three months later in 1923 and his widow asked the State to give her State aid. She could not read or write English and was given an alien's status. The authorities stepped in and said she must go back to Italy. A charity organization came to the mother's aid. She made three separate fights against deportation and learned to speak English and gave the children schooling.

Recently she was called for examination in naturalization court and failed. She went before Federal Judge E. S. Thomas and today she was told she might become a citizen.

SALEM MAN WINS DELAY IN EXTRADITION FIGHT

Wanted for alleged bank robbery in Missouri, William Germain of Salem succeeded in staving off extradition today, although Governor Fuller has directed State police officers to hand him over to Missouri policemen waiting here to arrest him.

Germain's habeas corpus petition was referred to the full bench of the Supreme Court by Justice Braley when Attorney William R. Scharton offered to prove the signature of a deputy sheriff of Missouri was a forgery on an affidavit recited in the robbery. Scharton first offered to prove Germain was in Salem when the bank in De Soto, Mo., was robbed. The latter ruled he was only concerned with the regularity of the extradition papers.

THINK SLAYER IS SUICIDE

Joseph Boychauk, alleged murderer of Mary Rimanuk, twelve-year-old Peabody girl who gave her own life to save her mother and the slayer's bullets, is a suicide, in the opinion of Peabody and Salem police, and the North river will be dragged in the search for his body.

Boychauk's automobile was found near the North River and he had told his brother that how could commit suicide if he could get some money and that his body would be found in North River.

Mrs. Rimanuk, who received several bullets in her body despite her daughter's sacrifice, will live, according to physicians.

Frank Boychauk, the suspect's brother, near whose home the abandoned automobile was found, said that his brother had been acting peculiarly recently. He had demanded money of Frank and threatened suicide. He had also told his brother that whatever he might do he would not be taken by the police alive, but would commit suicide first.

Mrs. Rimanuk said she had refused to marry Boychauk because she knew he had a wife and family in Russia. Three weeks ago, she told the police, he had threatened to kill her and family if she would not marry him.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR HUB CELEBRATION

The committee of seven appointed by Mayor Nichols to arrange for the celebration of Boston's 300th birthday in 1930 gathered at the Chamber of Commerce today for the first meeting. The committee includes A. C. Ratshesky, chairman; Wellington Wells, vice-chairman; Henry V. Cunningham, treasurer, George H. Johnson, secretary; Richard S. Twelling, James F. Jones and Mrs. Curtis Guild. The committee discussed the raising of funds for the celebration, particularly as to how money should be given by the Federal, State and city governments.

Pugilistic "Rudy" Fails to Excite Chicago Writer

Chicago, July 21.—Rudolph Valentino's pugilistic aspirations today seemed doomed to die aborning.

The movie sheik wanted to fight the anonymous writer of an editorial in a Chicago paper, in which cosmetics and pomades for men, as vended by a slot machine in Chicago's newest ballroom, invoked the use of exclamation points.

Valentino sent out a challenge to the writer who had termed Rudolph the prototype of the modern American male and "The Beautiful Gardener's Son," and asked why he had not been drowned years ago. Valentino intimated that he could give a good account of himself at fisticuffs, but the writer of the editorial has taken no notice of the movie actor's dander.

HE WILL PAY DEBT TO WIDOW IN 15 YEARS

New Britain, Ct., July 21 (A.P.)—Walter Majewski has if fifteen-year task ahead of him to pay a debt but he does not have to stay in jail any longer. He had been shut up several weeks because of a civil judgment against him awarded to Mrs. Lasxarzewski, whose husband he killed in a fight.

Majewski took the poor debtor's oath but the woman tied him up by legal action so he remained in jail.

Today he agreed to pay $1 a day [illegible] amount of $3,250 with interest, and it was figured that fifteen years hence he would be out of that debt.

Smoke Causes Alarm

Newburyport, July 21.—Smoke, caused by the blocking of a chimney in what used to be the Ocean House, corner of Titcomb and Merrimac streets, now owned by Abraham Mahaklan and Harry Kalothian, resulted in somebody sounding the alarm from Box 45 on Tuesday afternoon. As a precaution, a stream of water was sent down the chimney.

KNOWS CRIMES IN CHICAGO

New York, July 21 (A.P.)—George Cohen of Chicago, arrested today as a suspect in a $75,000 jewel robbery here on Monday, admitted to the police that he had knowledge of crime conditions in Chicago that would be helpful to the district attorney there.

"Do you mean the murder of Assistant District Attorney McSwiggen?" he was asked by the police.

"Well, the Chicago district attorney will know what I mean," was the reply.

Cohen, alias Mitchell and Simmons, give his address as No. 4241 Roosevelt road, Chicago, and confessed, according to the police, that he had taken part in the jewelry holdup of the wholesale store of Heyman & Filgin in the Maiden Lane diamond district.

He was arrested with Solomon Brofman of New York in an automobile on Broadway by four detectives, who said they found loaded revolvers and a sawed-off shotgun in the car.

The police say Cohen admitted he had knowledge of many "big crimes" in Chicago, that he came to New York on July 12

Centenarian Gets First Auto Ride After Being Hit

Olean, N. Y., July 21 (I.N.S.).—The first ride ever taken in an automobile by David Forrester, centenarian, may be his last. Forrester was struck by an automobile while crossing the street and conveyed to the hospital in the machine. Doctors today held out little hope for his recovery. The aged man suffered fractures of the hip and skull injuries. The centenarian had often boasted that he had never ridden in an automobile. When he regained consciousness in the hospital, he said: "I had to get knocked down to get a ride in one of those wagons."

Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; A Mad Whirl of Adventure and Pleasure

"You heard what I said, Kelvin; you can't hide in here," barked Rogers. Kelvin leaned on the table and glared.

Joslyn Poe, daughter of a proud, but impoverished Virginia family, wants a career, not marriage. Her mother wants her to wed. The wild blood of a line of daring women runs in her veins. She wants adventure. A seeress tells her of the "wildness" in her blood. She goes to a dance. She determines she will settle her problem that night—to marry George Ransom, well-to-do, but no dandy, or—go to New York in seek of adventure. She meets a stranger at the dance.

Milton Stein, the stranger, advises Joslyn to go to the city and to dance. Joslyn, hungry and discouraged, is heard weeping by Kittie Lane, a manicurist. Kittie gets Lee Rogers, a friend, to invite them to dinner.

CHAPTER III.

"THE boy friend'll meet us at The Galloping Hind and pay the fare," Kittie told Joslyn, as she blithely signalled a taxicab. "That's lesson number One in the gentle art of getting by in the big town. It isn't an art, though. It's a science. Never spend a cent when you can work a man for it."

Joslyn smiled and tried not to betray the unpleasant sensation stirred by Kittie's words.

"What's this friend like who's taking us to dinner?" she asked, after a moment, and that ignored Kittie's mercenary observations.

"Oh, he's all right, if you don't mind 'em a little cynical. Kind lanky and lazy—about thirty. He's got money, but he's not exactly rollin' in it. We got acquainted from sitting together on top a bus. He never showed any signs of real spending, but he's always good for a feed. Just a handy guy to know."

The taxi eased up to a stop in front of a canvas canopy, and a functionary in a green cape and military cap opened the door. As the girls left the machine, a tall figure concluded a swift piece of business with the driver, and greeted them, hat in hand.

She Meets Lee

"Meet the friend," said Kittie, lightly. "Miss Poe, Mr. Rogers."

The man took Joslyn's extended hand, bowed slightly. His face was the square, lean type, with level brows, surmounted by crisp, somewhat unruly sandy hair. His eyes were blue and noticeably steady.

"Kittie tells me you're a stranger in New York, Miss Poe," he said gravely. "I think perhaps you'll find The Galloping Hind interesting. While I've been waiting I noticed some rather well known people going in—several movie stars and an opera singer or two."

They entered a long, low room, mauve lighted, past countless tables where ice tinkled in glasses and cigarette smoke wreathed in the air

BRITAIN NOT SEEKING REVISION

Add 10 Men to Fight Bay State Rum-Runners

ANY DEBT MOVE UP TO U.S.

Government Does Not Support Attacks on America by Rothermore Press

London, July 21 (I.N.S.).—The British government does not support the attacks of the Rothermore Press upon the United States for its policy with regard to payment of debts.

This was made clear in official quarters today, when it was stated the government does not intend to seek a revision of the British debt settlement nor does it encourage such attacks as the Rothermore press is making.

WILL NEVER SEEK REVISION.

An official statement issued from government sources stated Great Britain will never seek a revision of the terms of the American debt settlement and if any revision is ever effected it will have to be initiated by the United States government.

Newspapers, other than the Rothermore newspapers, are not devoting a great deal of space to the debt question.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, aboard the S. S. Majestic, today wireloosed to the International News Service stating that he did not care to comment upon the statements made in the House of Commons by Winston Churchill, criticizing the United States debt policy, without having the full text of Churchill's speech before him.

The Daily News, in a frank editorial today, suggests that the frank discussions of the past few days can do no harm. "It is just as well," said the News, "that Americans understand how her action on the debts is regarded throughout Europe."

IRISH VETS TO ESCORT MANNIX

Will March Before Archbishop on the Way to Symphony Hall

By JAMES WALSH.

Archbishop Daniel Mannix of Melbourne, Australia, champion of Ireland's full independence, is expected to face an enormous throng inside and outside of Symphony Hall tonight, when he will tell his story of his native country, her trials, her woes, her hopes and ambitions.

Dr. James T. Gallagher of Charlestown, who is known all over the country for his work for Ireland, will preside at the meeting and reception to the Archbishop.

Officers and representatives of various Irish societies and organizations will be there. People of Irish extraction will come from all over the State. The doors will be open at seven. No seats will be reserved. It will be a case of first come first served.

According to plans of the committee in charge of Archbishop Mannix's visit, Irish Republican Army Veterans will meet at the Copley-Plaza this evening and will march in escort to the Australian prelate to Symphony Hall.

Archbishop Mannix is accompanied on this trip by the Rt. Rev. John McCarthy, bishop of Sandhurst, Australia, a neighboring diocese to the archdiocese of Melbourne.

The Archbishop was received by the Governor in the executive chamber at noon. The Governor declared it was an honor and a privilege to have the Archbishop call.

Councillor George E. Curran introduced the Archbishop and the committee to the Governor. In a chat about the warm weather, during which Governor Fuller quoted Emerson on our New England weather, Archbishop Mannix said that in all the time that he had been in Melbourne, he had never noticed an extreme in hot or cold weather. "I have never seen frost or snow there," said he.

The Governor voiced a wish to entertain the visiting prelate at luncheon, but Archbishop Mannix said he appreciated the Governor's courtesy but he was only here for a few hours longer and couldn't possibly find the time.

LURED HER TO HUB WITH BRIGHT WEDDING RING

16-YEAR-OLD GIRL DESERTED

Elizabeth M. O'Connell of Irvington, N. J., is held by Somerville police as a runaway, while her sweetheart is sought on a serious charge. She says she was practically kidnaped from home. They lived in a Somerville lodging house while she waited for him to marry her. Then he disappeared.

CHIEFS OF POLICE TO BE NAMED

U.S. Customs Service to Hunt Dope Smugglers Also in New Drive

Ten new men, including several chiefs of police of Massachusetts towns, are to be added to the lists of men in the Customs Service for the Port of Boston, according to Collector of the Port W. W. Lufkin.

Collector Lufkin said he did not wish to give out the names of the men as yet as they have been sent to Washington for approval. The ten were selected by Lufkin and Deputy Collector Thomas Finnegan from 20 eligibles.

The new men will form a liaison squad to keep contact between local police and the customs and revenue officers.

The increase is in line with the government's policy of increasing the forces that guard the country's borders against rum-running and miscellaneous immigrant smugglers.

In addition to the local increases, six new men are to be appointed in Vermont, 18 in Northern New York, 24 in New York city and 20 in Florida.

ATTORNEYS NAMED ON WATER COMMISSION

Joseph H. Solliday of Dedham and Charles M. Davenport of Boston, two attorneys, were today appointed by Governor Fuller as members of the special commission of which Davis B. Keniston of the metropolitan district commission is chairman, to take charge of the work of enlarging the water supply of metropolitan district.

Under the act passed by the last Legislature, a tunnel will be constructed from the Wachusett reservoir to take the flood waters of the Upper Ware River at Coldbrook. Eventually the work will be extended to the Swift River.

Commissioners Solliday and Davenport will receive $4,000 a year for the five years of their appointment.

BLACK AND WHITE CLUB PROSECUTION RESTS

The government's case against the Phalanx Club of Roxbury, famous night resort more commonly known as the Black and White Club, rested today, and the club begins its defense tomorrow in Roxbury District Court. The police told of finding liquor at the place, while the three civilian witnesses said they went there, were at first refused admittance, were later admitted, were charged $1.25 for a sandwich each, and when they refused to buy liquor, they said, they were thrown out. Persons living nearby told of noise from the place.

Door Kills Girl

Webster, July 21 (A.P.)—Harriet Swiblin, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Swiblin, No. 30 Spring street, was instantly killed at the North Webster plant of the R. S. Slater & Sons when a heavy fire door dropped, crushing her skull.

BUTLER LAUDS TAX AND DEBT REDUCTIONS

With Senator William M. Butler as the principal figure, and an attendance of more than 1,000 male Republicans of Essex County, the first of the big G. O. P. outings was held today at Princemere, the beautiful Hamilton estate of Frederick H. Prince.

Speakers in addition to Senator Butler, included Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, Governor Fuller and Lieutenant Governor Frank G. Allen.

The feature of the event was the turning over by Mr. Prince to the county commissioners, for the nominal sum of $1, a stretch of road through the Essex-Manchester woods around Chebacco Lake, constructed by the donor at a cost of $50,000.

BUTLER LAUDS WEEKS.

Senator Butler, after lauding John W. Weeks as "a great citizen, a distinguished Senator and an able Secretary of War," declared the "government of the United States is not only the best government under which any people have ever lived, but is also the biggest business enterprise in the world."

Recounting achievements of the five years since the Republicans took over the reins of Government, Senator Butler declared an annual expenditure of more than $6,000,000,000 in 1919 had been reduced to $3,500,000,000 by 1926.

In addition to the cut in expenditures, he continued, surpluses for the six years aggregated $1,344,000,000.

TAX BURDEN CUT.

Each surplus, he said, meant a reduction in the tax burden, as a direct result of which the taxpayers will in the next fiscal year pay $1,650,000,000 less than in 1920. In the same period, he declared, the national debt was cut more than $6,000,000,000.

NAMES DREW TO HUB FIN. COM.

Governor Fuller today appointed William J. Drew, a practicing attorney of Boston, as a member of the Boston Finance Commission. Drew takes the place of Charles L. Carr, who is promoted as chairman of the commission. The other member of the commission, John P. Moors, was today also reappointed.

Former Mayor Charles H. Adams of Melrose was appointed chairman of the Commission on the Necessaries of Life, to succeed Eugene C. Hultman, who resigned to become fire commissioner of Boston.

Other appointments and reappointments were: Dr. George M. Kline as commissioner of mental diseases; C. Wesley Hale of Springfield, member of a commission to improve, repair and preserve the Massachusetts military monument and its surroundings at Petersburg, Va.; William S. Allen, Greenfield, clerk of the Franklin District Court; Arthur F. Sullivan, Boston, member of the commission on the blind; Talbot Aldrich, Boston, trustee Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital, to succeed N. Edmunds Paine, who declined reappointment; Harry L. Spaulding, Wellesley, trustee Massachusetts Homeopathic Hospital.

To Visit Canada

Montreal, Que., July 1 (I.N.S.).—Announcement was made today that Sir James Craig, Premier of Northern Ireland, with Lady Craig and their son and daughter, will come to Canada shortly for a two months' visit, sailing from Southampton on the Doric on August 10.

THUGS RETURN $40 AS THEY FIND $10,000

Chicago, July 21 (A.P.).—Lost from two safes containing from $4,000 to $10,000 was sufficient for seven crackmen who invaded automobile row early today, so they returned $40 to one of four persons they had bound and gagged. They walked out after spending three hours in looting the Buick Motor Company main sales office.

Three of the robbers acted as guards of the two man and two women they had bound and gagged. From one of them the guards took $40, but when the result of their compatriots' attack on the safes was learned it was returned with the remark: "You'll need this small change worse than we will."

Airmen Escort Crown Prince

Los Angeles, July 21 (A.P.).—An aerial guard of honor will wing its way to San Bernardino today to escort Crown Prince Gustaf Adolphus and Princess Louise of Sweden through Southern California to Los Angeles.

Ossipee Farm Burned

Ossipee, N. H., July 21 (A.P.).—The farm buildings of John Harmon in the centre of Lie village were destroyed by fire today. The loss was $20,000.

YOUTHS HELD IN BOY'S DEATH

Pleading not guilty, two Roxbury boys were held in $2,000 each today in Brookline district court on a charge of manslaughter in the death of ten-year-old Joseph A. Donovan, Jr., of Pearl street, Brookline, who was run down and killed by a stolen automobile.

The boys are John McDonough, 18, of Lawn street, and Anthony Karewich, 18, of Arcola street. Their arrest resulted from clever detective work by Sergeant John Donovan of the Brookline police and Roxbury officers who had nothing but the number of the stolen car when they began their search.

McDonough was recently released from the reformatory at Shirley, according to the police, having served a term there for reckless driving. When arrested the boys are said to have told the police they thought they hit a traffic signal-post and did not know it was a boy until they read the newspapers.

RECEIVED $5,000 TO "LAY LOW" ON PERMIT

New York, July 21 (A.P.).—A former agent of the Intelligence and of the prohibition enforcement forces told a court today of receiving "$5,000 to 'lay low'" with an associate, so the Herman Chemical Company might be able to renew a permit to handle alcohol in Boston.

The testimony was given by Pat Roche as a government witness in the trial of Herman I. Goldman, Theodore Schwartzman, and the Herman Chemical Company on charges of violating the national prohibition act.

RIVAL OF BRIDE STAYS IN CABIN

Winsted, Ct., July 21 (A.P.).—Louis S. Griffing of Hartford, who tried last week to elect his former close friend, Mrs. Marion Hemming, attractive divorcee, from "The Cabin" at Highland Lake colony, has come to "Skyland," a 462-acre estate in Tolland, Mass. Mrs. Hemming stays in the cottage and for the rest of the Summer, in looking across the way under the pines, will not see Griffing and his bride, who had been in "Ferncliff" since the middle of last week. She claims that Griffing gave her the cottage with a promise of marriage before he went to Springfield, Mass., and married Mrs. Lena S. Dickinson, widow, with two children.

Mrs. Griffing had obtained an option on this after her recent marriage and yesterday sold the option to Burton E. Moore, Winsted realtor, with the understanding that they might occupy the cottage until October 1. Moore, it was reported bought the option to acquire the valuable timber land for a local lumber company. The house and furnishings were valued at $10,000.

ASKS HALL-MILLS PROBE MOVED FROM COUNTY

New Brunswick, N. J., July 21 (A.P.).—Prosecutor Toolan, of Middlesex County, today announced he had requested two State troopers and two Jersey city detectives, who have been endeavoring to find evidence which would warrant a re-opening of the Hall-Mills murder case, to transfer their activities to Somerset County.

The prosecutor said several days investigation had convinced him that there was no cause for another attempt to solve the four-year-old mystery.

GETS TWO YEARS IN ADMISSION OF THEFT

Martin Florio of Greenough lane, North End, was convicted in Municipal Court today of being one of three men who took $27 from the pocket of Henry Donovan of Tremont street, Stoneham, and, although Florio said he stole the money to assist in paying his brother's funeral expenses, Judge Sullivan gave him two years. The other two men, Daniel Lalore of Fleet street and Angelo Venuti of Webster place, were put on probation.

DEMAND DEATH SENTENCES FOR AUTO THIEVES

Atlantic City, N. J., July 20 (I.N.S.).—Police "third degrees" should be eliminated, professional auto thieves should be punished by death and women should not be given jobs as detectives because they are too sentimental, it was declared here today at the close of the fifth annual convention of the International Secret Service Association held in the Ambassador Hotel.

"Automobile stealing," declared Jacob Mintz, Cleveland secretary of the body, "is a growing plague and should be fought with the old hayseed methods. It should be made a capital offense, except for youths who steal machines for joy-rides and who should be sent to reform schools."

John H. Taylor of Philadelphia was re-elected president of the association.

EDWARDS FLAYS BORAH'S SLUR

Washington, July 21 (A.P.)—Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, was accused of casting "a dastardly slur" on hundreds of Americans seeking modification of the Volstead law in a formal statement today by Senator Edwards, Democrat, New Jersey.

He challenged Borah to disprove his loyalty because he had been "an uncompromising advocate of anti-Volsteadism."

Senator Edwards said the speech by Borah in Augusta, Ga., contained "more fury and less sense than any other thoughts to which he had given expression since he attained the heights of premier American statesmanship."

"For Senator Borah to place honest and sincere advocates of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and modification of the Volstead Act in the same category with Russian Bolsheviks, black shirt Fascists, and Polish demagogic dictators," Edwards continued, "is a dastardly slur on scores, aye, hundreds of minds just as genuinely American, just as patriotic, just as unaffected with dishonest motives or intentions, and just as free of disguise and false pretenses as his own."

PORTSMOUTH GIRL BRIDE OF ITALIAN IN ROME

Rome, July 21 (A.P.).—Miss Edna Mary Martin, daughter of F. L. Martin of Portsmouth, N. H., was married last Thursday to Raffaele Montuodi, vice-prefect of Rome, it was made public today.

A civil ceremony was performed in the presence of a few witnesses at the capital in the early morning, and the usual documentation and publication of the banns was dispensed with by special order from the attorney-general.

The couple left immediately on a honeymoon trip. Signer Montuodi is 46.

2 R. I. PICKPOCKETS ROB HEAT SUFFERERS; JAILED

New York, July 21 (A.P.).—Two youths who said they were from Providence, R. I., were sentenced to four months in the workhouse today for picking pockets of tenement dwellers on the Bowery who sought relief from the heat by sleeping on the sidewalks. The youths, Joseph Ziegler, nineteen, and Robert Kelley, twenty, were observed for fifteen minutes early today by detectives.

Applaud American's Aid to Find Autos

Taking advantage of the new service inaugurated by the Boston Evening American, automobile owners from all over the State today appealed for assistance in recovering their stolen machines, and applauded the inauguration of the project.

While the majority of victims seem to be owners of popular-priced models, a great many owners of expensive makes reported their cars missing.

The whole staff of the Boston Evening American and its thousands of readers were engaged in the work of tracing the machines listed in this office.

The latest list of stolen machines follows:

WATERMELONS AT HALF-PRICE

Chicago, July 21 (A.P.).—Watermelons have suddenly jumped to first place in the United States market supply abundance, either of fruit or vegetables. The grand total of watermelon shipments is more than 1,000 carloads a day.

Reports from the government bureau of agricultural economics today are that watermelons at present comprise more than a fourth of the country's total shipments of products, although the general movement is 4,500 cars heavier than a year ago.

Prices of nearly all fruits and vegetables, wholesale, are lower, with watermelons at about half-price as compared with last July.

DEER KILLED IN LEAP FROM WORCESTER CLIFF

Worcester, July 21—A 90-pound deer leaped from the high cliff at the Summit in Greendale to the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad and was killed instantly. Frank French removed the carcass to his store and notified Game Warden J. N. Snell.

ASKS HALT IN GO-GAS SALE

Worcester, July 21 (A.P.).—Judge Winfred H. Whiting of Superior Court has ordered a hearing for July 29 at Boston on the bill in equity filed in Superior Court here by the Massachusetts Gas and Oil Company.

The concern, incorporated as a holding company representing 4,000 investors and approximately $1,250,000 is invested funds, asks that the Go-Gas Company be restrained from selling its filling stations to the Standard Oil Company unless that company agrees to continue the dividends promised the investors. The bill also asks that further sale of gasoline from these filling stations be prohibited unless provision is made for the promised dividend.

It is claimed the investors did so under the agreement that one cent of the money derived from each gallon of gasoline would be divided among the stockholders in the town or city where the station is located. The Go-Gas Company operates 150 stations in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Moscow, July 21.—The welcome given here to Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford is declared to have been the greatest for any foreigners since the revolution. Crowds clamored to get near them as they left their train.

WOMEN! TEAR GAS IS BEST WEAPON AGAINST THUGS

Chicago, July 21 (Universal).—Women may know how to protect themselves from the "mashers," but when they are alone in a house they are helpless to cope with a robber, unless—they have tear gas bombs. Take from Colonel H. B. C. Goss, former chief of the chemical service of the Second Division, U. S. A.

Mr. Goss made that statement in an address before the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs in session here.

"And not only for the women," the colonel said, "but for the police as well, tear gas is more effective than a bullet, inasmuch as it leaves the felon helpless for a half hour, but injures him in no way. It is quicker than a bullet too."

So the solution of preventing robberies of lone women is to give them tear gas bombs. Women for the most part don't know how to use a gun anyway, the colonel said.

So that's it!

ALL of a sudden it dawned on him.

For a long time he had felt that things were being said about him behind his back.

Now—he had actually overheard it.

And said by men whom he had regarded as his best friends in the business!

Maybe they were right—he didn't know. But at least he would find out and apply the right remedy.

You, yourself, rarely know when you have halitosis (unpleasant breath). That's the insidious thing about it. And even your closest friends won't tell you.

Sometimes, of course, halitosis comes from some deep-seated organic disorder that requires professional advice. But usually—and fortunately—halitosis is only a local condition that yields to the regular use of Listerine as a mouth wash and gargle. It puts you on the safe and polite side. Moreover, in using Listerine to combat halitosis, you are quite sure to avoid sore throat and those more serious illnesses that start with throat infections.

Listerine halts food fermentation in the mouth and leaves the breath sweet, fresh and clean. Not by substituting some other odor but by really removing the old one. The Listerine odor itself quickly disappears.

This safe and long-trusted antiseptic has dozens of different uses; note the little circular that comes with every bottle. Your druggist sells Listerine in the original brown package only—never in bulk. There are four sizes: 14 ounce, 7 ounce, 3 ounce and 1½ ounce. Buy the large size for economy.—Lambert Pharmacal Company, Saint Louis, U. S. A.

THE HALITOSIS

Well—it worked!
For quite a while we challenged people to try Listerine Tooth Paste. Sales now show that when they try it they stick to it!

KEARNS ANSWERS DEMPSEY'S CHARGES

Broken Heart Sent Darcy to Grave Kearns Declares

THIS is the ninth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey. It is the first time that the man who put Jack Dempsey on the pugilistic map tells of his experiences when he was a prize fighter. Read this story every day in the Boston Evening American.

By JACK KEARNS
NINTH CHAPTER

I WAS greatly interested in the slang of Australia. Maybe it shouldn't be called slang. It is the underworld lingo and is founded along lines of the "dog latin" we use in this country as kids.

Jack Kearns

It does use it to hide their purpose, but it has come into such universal usage that he is a stupid cop that doesn't know it. Here is an example of this Australian lingo.

For instance, money is called "bees and honey." A girl is a "twist and a twirl." The wife is the "storm and strife" or the missus, the "cheese and kisses." They go to great pains to make the substitutes sound like the original word and at the same time mean the same, but a distorted and sometimes laughable twist.

Diamonds with them are "sample simons." Head is the "lump of lead," the pillow is the "weeping willow." The room is "the shovel and broom," the suite is the "fiddle and flute."

Teeth, "uppers and downers"; the tires and stoppers"; legs, the "mumley pegs"; hat, the "lean and fat"; whiskey, "gay and frisky"; beer, "oh my dear"; bar, "near and far"; feet, "plates of meat"; street, "fields of wheat"; sleep, "plow the deep"; bed, "roses red"; stairs, "rolling pairs"; table, "Cain and Abel."

STAGE FOLK USE SLANG.

Every fellow who ever went to Australia seemed to become infatuated with the lingo. It has drifted across the seas and I nearly fell over one day in San Francisco when Billy [illegible] me. TWILIGHT LEAGUE GOSSIP

By EDDIE DONDERO

ACCORDING to an accurate Twilight League philosopher, 3,423 paid admissions were tabulated at Tufts Oval, Somerville, during the past two evenings. Johnny Norton's athletes haven't played before such large home gatherings since the season got underway. This record was chalked up only because Somerville is now on par with its rivals and reciprocation is shown by rendering Class A Assembling.

PRESIDENT J. WARREN MOONEY announced today that he was considering three offers for the Cambridge franchise vacated by Lan Lemby & Co. The cities that have made applications were Framingham, Louis Cote, acting for Cambridge, and Joe O'Gorman, pro-tem pilot of the Postal baseball title holders. Each of these teams is not inactive, but is willing to join at a 12 hour notice.

DOWN is the calendar of action [illegible] two games on the evening's [illegible] Dorchester visits Lynn, the home of the General Electric ball players, while Malden and Fore River clash at Quincy. Such attractions will break the deadlock for first place which at present has Fore River and Dorchester knotted on the pinnacle.

WHILE item after item is written and reams of copy turned out about prosperity in the after supper circuit our Lynn correspondent informed us that Lynn lost exactly $5,000 during the first half. Purchasing the championship for that modest amount is rather unfortunate for Tom Whelan's cash. However, the General Electric athletic association expects to balance these shortcomings.

OFTEN times the New England League and Twilight clubs are accredited to play in Lynn on the same night which is unfair to the Twi. Leaguers.

FRED WHOLLEY, former Cambridge hurler, has been signed by Malden. He will undertake to bond the bat with Manager Frank Coughlin and two more capable receivers are not to obtained anywhere in the vogue.

"HALF JANVRIN, formerly of the Red Sox; Dick Casey, once a Detroit Tiger and Benafri are playing sensationally for the Fore River delegation. This trio has lifted the club into the first division when experts figured that they would be lucky if they could win half of the games played.

Babe Hits No. 29

New York, July 21 (A.P.)—Babe Ruth hit his twenty-ninth home run of the season in the first inning of the first game of a double-header with the Chicago White Sox at the Yankee Stadium today. Paschal and Koenig were on base when Ruth lifted the ball to the right field bleachers.

Hal Chase, Jr., Hopes to Eclipse Father

San Francisco, July 21 (I.N.S.)—A lithe, bronzed lad of sixteen walked into the offices of the Mission Club of the Pacific Coast League today and signed a contract.

The boy is Hal Chase, Jr., son of the once famous baseball star of the same name and according to those who have watched him in action, a chip of the old block when it comes to playing baseball.

Young Chase was determined to make baseball his career and to redeem on the diamond the name of his father.

He is still in school and will remain there for the next two years, practicing with the Missions on Saturdays and Sundays and during vacation periods.

serving. This advantage he followed up by breaking through his opponent's offerings to go into a two love lead.

Harrison then varied the monotony by breaking through Harada. The lap was driving accurately for the corners, but was troubled somewhat by the Californian's pet chop shot.

Both players were evidently affected by the heat, but after a brief intermission Harada resumed his attack and started off on the third set by putting away the first three games. The superiority of the Jap was demonstrated by the fact that Harrison failed to secure a point until the fourth game.

Here's the Cigarette
Because "It's Toasted"

LUCKY STRIKES are made from the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos, perfectly blended.

Besides this supreme quality of leaf tobacco as compared with all other Cigarettes—"IT'S TOASTED".

Just what does this mean—this phrase, "IT'S TOASTED"?

The tobacco is oven toasted at very high heats for 45 minutes; then chilled with the moisture completely restored. The toasting brings out the hidden flavors of the superbly fine tobacco. The chilling seals in these flavors; seals in, too, the moisture that has been restored. It all acts like a cold plunge on the pores of the body.

That's why LUCKIES taste so good. Why LUCKIES are always fresh when they come to you. Why millions prefer this uniquely fine cigarette.

BECAUSE IT'S TOASTED

RICKARD HOLDS OPTION

Rickard has an option on Dempsey's services, and he knew at Kearns' contract has expired he will exercise it immediately by having the fighter sign a contract thus signing out Kearns from any of the funds.

Rickard again declared this morning that he was ready to make a positive announcement regarding a Dempsey-Tunney bout and that in less "several days" whereby [illegible] happened he would [illegible] name the location and date of the bout. [illegible] temper it was [illegible] as the [illegible] day.

Normile, who arrived in Chicago shouting Dempsey only weighed 190 pounds and was in superb shape made it plain the champion had no idea of fulfilling a contract with the Chicago Coliseum Club to fight Harry Wills in Chicago.

Normile said the Chicago club forced to pay Dempsey $1[illegible] on [illegible] March, as agreed, and as a consequence the contract was now null and void.

TEX PLANS FINAL APPEAL.

That the wise Mr. Rickard has any future Dempsey bout right at the bottom of the bag and intends to stage it either in New York or vicinity or Chicago there appeared no question today.

As soon as Dempsey has signed a contract with him, Rickard will jump a rattler to New York and make a final appearance before the commission on a Dempsey-Tunney fight. Should the New York body bow him out, Rickard plans to sell his contract to the highest bidder, presumably some one in Chicago.

While spending five days in Chicago preparing for Dempsey's arrival, Rickard has not been idle.

Details of a visit paid by him to the new Illinois Boxing Commission revealed today that Rickard highly complimented the commissioners on this and that, including the weather, and established himself on extremely friendly terms with the commission.

While it was stated he did not formally discuss a Dempsey bout with the Illinois solons, he did mention it "en passant," so the ultra in Cauliflower Alley declared.

Having Dempsey's contract in his pocket and basking in the smile of the Illinois Commission, Rickard may, with much fortitude, face the frost of the New York board.

New York or Chicago may be right or wrong but Mr. Rickard is a soulful right.

Grassin Out to Gain Bike Honors

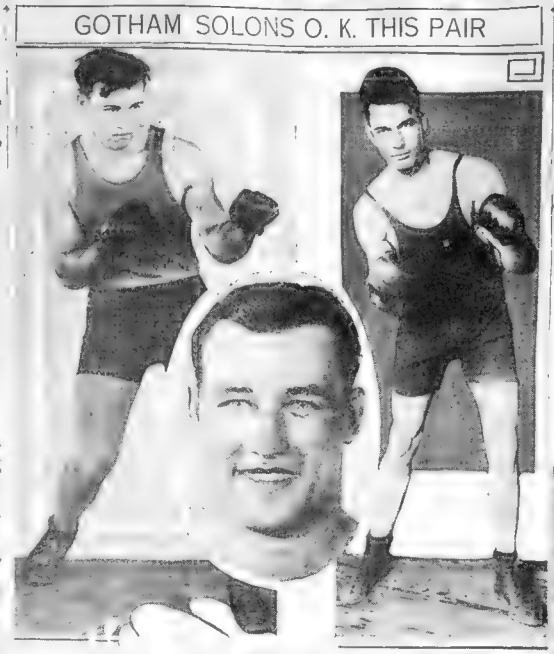
Bobby Grassin will attempt to add more laurels to his name tonight when with five other paced cyclists, he attempts to break George Wiley's hour record for the Revere track.

Grassin is world's champion, George Chapman, Frank Keenan, Theodore Wenadau, Charles Jaeger and Vincent Madonna will attempt to outpedal the champ.

Tonight's race is listed as one of the championship series, with points scored by the first four riders counting in the race for the American paced crown.

An Australian pursuit race has Jackie Luyten, Lew Hall, Armand Heiangen, Red Jarvis and Archie Villa lined up equal distance apart on the track.

GOTHAM SOLONS O. K. THIS PAIR



WILL WAGER BATTLE AT CONEY ISLAND IN SEPT.
The New York Boxing Commission has finally stamped its approval of a match between Jack Sharkey, on left and in oval, and Jack Delaney, light heavyweight champion of the world, on right. Sharkey has signed for the mill and Delaney is willing, so that all that's left is the clanking of the gong to set them in action.

Sharkey Meets Champion Early in September

By JACK CONWAY.

JACK DELANEY, world's light-heavyweight champion, and Jack Sharkey, [illegible] king will fight it out in a ten [illegible] round battle [illegible] Coney Island [illegible] on [illegible] it was announced [illegible] Tex Rickard [illegible] Sharkey [illegible] Delaney [illegible] Boxing Commission [illegible] approval [illegible] bout [illegible] Dempsey-Tunney [illegible] Chicago [illegible] Harry Wills [illegible] for such a contest [illegible] Rickard [illegible] keeping Bowers vote on [illegible] side.

Delaney will not engage in any bout before he tackles Sharkey. It was originally planned to put Jack against Paul Berlenbach, former light heavyweight champion. Hymie Fugazy has given the Charles bout to Paul Berlenbach. These men will clash at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on August 31.

The supporting card to the Berlenbach-Carpentier bout will [illegible] together Jackie Goodbody of Hollywood, lightweight champion, and Kid Kaplan, former featherweight king, who is now campaigning as a lightweight.

A week later Berlenbach will be pitted against Mike McTigue while a suitable opponent will be secured by Fugazy for Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia. It was hoped that Young Stribling would be able to tackle Loughran, but word from his south Georgian home indicates that the Georgian Peon won't be ready to appear before the first of October.

BUDGET HELPS FURNISH THE HOME

How to Succeed in Keeping Outgo in Bounds

Budget Talk No. 106
By MARTHA LEE

TODAY'S the day we are going to see what Uncle Sam's Bureau of Labor statistics has to say about furnishing a five-room home for the average family of five people.

The rooms are to be living room, dining room, kitchen and two bedrooms. This is considered the minimum amount of space for health for a family of husband, wife and three children—a boy of 12, a girl of 8 and a boy of 5.

Three sleeping rooms are really needed, but to meet this need the living room can be arranged so as to be adaptable for sleeping purposes.

Either the five rooms can be divided into three bedrooms, a living-room and a combination kitchen and dining room, or there can be a combined living and dining room, kitchen and three bedrooms or two bedrooms and a parlor.

This last arrangement is specially desirable as the children grow up and begin to receive visitors in the home.

Here is what Uncle Sam believes to be the necessary household equipment for this five-room working man's home:

FURNITURE.

Refrigerator—1—Smallest size and make sufficient in capacity for economical preservation of food and economy in the purchase of ice.
Tables—Dining room—1—Oak; extension table, pair; drop leaf; quarter.
Living room—1—Oak, plain, durable quality.

Sideboard—1—Medium size, oak.
Bureaus—2—Plain bureau, 1 white painted.
Chiffonier—1—White painted wood.
Beds, mattresses and springs—Double—Selected plain ticking to match bureau; durable full mattress and spring.
Single—2—Each: White enameled bedstead; durable full mattress and spring.
Cribs, mattress and spring—1—White enameled.

FURNISHINGS.

Towels—Kitchen—Hand towels—3—Cotton.
Bath towels—10—Turkish.
Hand towels—3—Part linen.
Table cloths—2—Cotton, bleached at hem.
Table covers—1—When table is set in.
Napkins—18—Part linen, 22 inch.
Blankets—Pair, double bed size—Part wool.
Pair, single bed size—3—Part wool.
Pair crib size—1—Part wool.

Case knives and forks—4.
Paring knife—1.
Wooden spoon—1.
Mixing spoons—3.
Pancake turner—1.

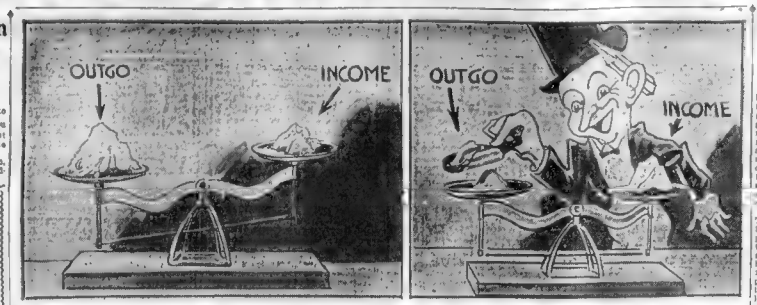
To answer your last question first. There is no question but that boarding would be the most economical plan under these circumstances. And the weekly savings could be put away toward furniture for a new home later. On the other hand, there is no denying that there's a lot more pleasure in housekeeping than boarding. On a $25 salary, $2.50 is allotted for savings and insurance, $5 a week for shelter, including business carfares, $3.50 for food, covering also business lunches, $2.50 for cloth ing, $3.00 for operating, making heat, light, laundry, telephone and household supplies under $1, such as string, soap, etc., and $1 a week for personal. I realize that low rents are difficult to find but other living expenses must also be met so if the income is small, it is fatal to pay a rent that will eat up the money needed for other expenses. If you board, you could afford to pay $14.50 for board, including carfares and business lunches.

This would leave you most of the operating expenses to add to the savings account. A $25 budget would allow $4 for savings and insurance, $ 50 for rent and business carfares, $10.50 for food, with business lunches, $3.50 for clothing, $3.50 for operating and $6 for personal. Out of this latter would come the $2 for the doctors and dentist's bills and $3 for furniture. It would be quite possible to go housekeeping on a $35 salary, Taking for our starting point the fireplace, which is nicely centered against a wall panel between the two windows, we proceed to equalize the decoration on both sides

In all symmetrical groupings it is essential to emphasize the exact centre of the pattern. It is not enough that your mind should estimate it, your eye, too, must be instantly impressed, which calls for a rather obvious arrangement

Once the centre is determined, it is an easy matter to build up the twin halves of the group. The only difficulty lies in providing, as a last subtle touch, a slight variation to break the monotony without destroying the pictures. Here, two different types of seats were introduced

One is a loveseat part velours and part brocatelle, the other is an easy chair completely upholstered



Does Outgo outweigh Income? Budget will balance them for you.

be. Would $35 a month be too high for rent? Says she noticed $5.50 given for rent in one of our budgets for $22 a week salary and does not think that anything for $22 a month can be found in Boston. Also asks the budget divisions for food, rent, etc., for a $35 salary with doctor's and dentist's bills to pay at the rate of $2 a week and furniture at $2. Would housekeeping be best

"The Red Lamp," a Thrilling New Serial

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

AND all this in the time it took me to get around the chair and to the wall switch near the door. And it was then, in the unexpected silence which followed the sound of that fall, in the instant between my finding the switch and turning it on, that I will swear that I saw once more by the glow of the red lamp the figure at the foot of the stairs, looking up.

Saw it and recognized it. Watched it turn around toward me with fixed and staring eyes, felt the cold wind which suddenly eddied about me, and frantically turning on the light, saw it fade like smoke into the shadows.

Behind the curtains of the cabinet somebody was working at the wall. Edith, very pale, was supporting Jane, who still remained in her strange auto-hypnotic condition. Livingstone's arm was about his wife.

And this was the picture when Greenough came running triumphantly down the stairs, the reward apparently in his pocket, and saw us there. He paid no attention to the rest of us, but stared at Livingstone with eyes which could not believe what they saw.

"Good God!" he said. "Then who is in there?"

He pointed to the wall behind the cabinet.

The steps by which Halliday solved the murder of the main house, and with it the mystery which had preceded it, constitute an interesting story in themselves. So certain was he that, by the time we were ready for the third seance, his material was already in the hands of the district attorney. And it was not the material he had given to Greenough.

For the solution of a portion of the mystery, then, one must go back to the main house, and consider the older part of it. It is well known that many houses of that period were provided with hidden passages by which the owners hoped to escape the Excise. Such an attempt, many years ago, had cost George Pierce his life.

But the passage leading from the old kitchen, now the den, to a closet in the room above it, had been blocked up for many years. The builder was dead; by all the laws of chance time might have gone on and the passage remained undiscovered.

In 1890, however, Eugenia Riggs bought the property, and in making repairs the old passage was discovered. Although she denies using it for fraudulent purposes, neither Halliday nor I doubt that she did so. She points to the plastered wall as her defence, but Halliday assures me that a portion of the baseboard, hinged to swing out, but locked from within, would have allowed easy access to the cabinet.

But Halliday had at the beginning no knowledge of this passage, with its ladder to the upper floor. He reached it by pure deduction.

"It had to be there," he says modestly. "And it was."

Up to the time young Gordon was attacked at the kitchen door, however, Halliday was frankly at sea. That is, he had certain suspicions, but that was all. He had discovered, for instance, that the cipher found in my garage was written on the same sort of bond paper as that used by Gordon, by the simple expedient of having Annie Cochran set him a sheet of it, on some excuse or other.

But his actual case began, I believe, with that attack on Gordon. At least he began at that time definitely to associate the criminal with the house.

"There was something fishy about it," is the way he puts it.

And with Dudley's story to me, forced by his fear that the boy knew it was he who had attacked him, the belief that it was "fishy" gained ground.

"Gordon was knocked out," he says. "And that ought to have been enough. But it was not. He was tied, too, and while he was still unconscious. Somebody wasn't taking a chance that he'd get back into the house very soon."

It was that "play for time," as he terms it, that made him suspicious.

All this time, of course, he was ignorant of any underlying motive; he makes it clear that he simply began, first to associate the crimes with the house, and then with Bethel. He kept going back to his copy of the unfinished letter, but "It didn't help much," he says quietly. "Only, these was murder indicated in it. And we were having murder."

He had three clues, two of them certain, one doubtful. The certain ones were the linen from the cellar of the boat, torn from a sheet belonging to the main house, and the small portion of the cipher. The one he was not certain about was the pens from an eyeglass, outside the culvert.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

THAT package of baking soda on the kitchen shelf can be immensely useful all over the house.

Baking Soda, whether Arm & Hammer Brand or Cow Brand, is pure bicarbonate of soda of the highest quality, untouched by human hands until the package is opened by the consumer.

Both brands are the same, both made by Church & Dwight Co., Inc., specialists in this line for over eighty years, and both brands will give exactly the same service—this baking soda is helpful everywhere, upstairs, downstairs, all around the house—it is a household necessity with a hundred important uses.

First Aid for Scalds and Burns

Baking Soda is effective when applied to burns or scalds. Apply a paste of Baking Soda and water to the affected parts, then cover with a damp cloth, and in most cases the pain will be relieved at once. When the skin is dry, remove it by bathing gently with a solution of baking soda and water—two teaspoonfuls of soda to each pint of water—then apply a fresh paste of baking soda, if necessary.

A Soothing, Sanitary Mouth Wash

Baking soda (bicarbonate of soda) has a soothing effect on the mucous membrane of the mouth in nearly all inflamed and irritated conditions. It also has the advantage of neutralizing acids. Dissolve one-half teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in a glass of water, and rinse the mouth regularly with this solution.

The Baby's Bottle

The welfare of the baby demands that all nursing bottles be kept absolutely pure. To make the baby's bottle sweet and sanitary, first wash it, then fill it with water, add one-half teaspoonful of baking soda (bicarbonate of soda) and let this solution stand in the bottle until it is needed.

Keep baking soda, Arm & Hammer Brand or Cow Brand, available throughout the house, its regular use means more comfort and better health for the whole family. Get a package today at your grocer's.

Martha Lee's Recipes

THE weight of the body is often an important indication of the state of health. A subnormal weight should be corrected as a defence against disease and an improvement in appearance.

If more food is supplied than is required to carry on the usual activities, the body stores this and is in reserve for emergencies and a gain in weight results. Good nutrition and a well balanced diet is the means to any material increase in flesh.

Oranges and lemons are rich in the vitamins which increase the nutrition of all food. Although acid in flavor, the reaction of these fruits in the body is alkaline, so that they form a perfect balance to the protein foods, fats and starches that repair and replace tissue and promote growth.

Oranges with their golden color and their ripe luscious beauty arouse the appetite which their cool delicious flavor increases. The natural fruit sugar that they contain is already partially predigested and is quickly assimilated.

The fuel value of the citrus fruits may be increased by the addition of milk sugar in nutritious beverages. Raw eggs are an excellent source of nourishment and are easily taken beaten into orange or lemon juice.

A salad served with an egg dressing should be part of the daily dietary. Oranges as a basis of this salad will neutralize the taste of the oil.

A glass of orange juice in the morning gives an appetite for breakfast, which is often too slight a meal to provide proper nourishment.

In order to accomplish a distinct increase in weight a continued effort is necessary regardless of appetite or even of minor digestive disturbances. It is well to remember that a weekly gain of one pound is apt to be better and more permanent than a more rapid increase.

Here are a few recipes valuable for increasing weight These recipes in most cases make one large serving or two small:

ORANGE CREAM EGG NOG—One egg, one and one-half teaspoons sugar, one half cup thin cream, one-half cup orange juice

Separate yolk from white of egg. Beat the yolk, add sugar and beat until creamy. Add cream and orange juice. Beat egg white until foamy and fold it in lightly. Serve at once. Contains 376 calories.

ORANGE EGG MALTED MILK—Add two tablespoon malted milk powder, 2 tablespoons orange juice, one egg, one tablespoon crushed ice, one-half cup milk, two tablespoons cream.

Mix malted milk powder, orange juice and egg and beat five minutes. Add milk, cream and ice and blend thoroughly. Strain and serve.

MARMALADE EGG TOAST—One egg, one-half teaspoon butter, speck of salt, one pound of toast, orange marmalade.

Separate yolk from white of egg. Beat white to a stiff froth and add salt to taste. Spread toast with butter and marmalade, put on egg white in shape of nest. Make a depression in centre and slip in butter and egg yolk. Cook in a moderate oven three or four minutes.

And that's all for the would-be fats for today.

This Day In Our History

AT the head of an expedition of about 35,000 men, Napoleon defeated the Mamelukes (Egyptian cavalry) in the battle of the Pyramids, on July 21, 1798. He was master of Egypt, but the destruction of his fleet by Nelson cut him off from France.

TARNISHED WINGS

by BEATRICE BURTON

Author of "GILDED KISSES" and "PIRATE OF HEARTS"

Story of a Boston Girl Who Liked Jazz Music and the Bright Lights

CHAPTER XXXI.

Copyrighted, N.A. Johnson Features, Inc.

MERRY was furiously angry. But there never was anything sweeter and more gentle than her voice when she answered Bill.

"You don't need to get so peeved Billy-Boy," she said softly. "You know how it is—I never go out with any man but you. I haven't for nearly a year. So isn't it only natural for people to think I'm going to marry you?"

"Yeah, that's just the trouble," he growled in a disgusted tone. "The minute a man looks at a girl every body starts wondering when he's going to marry her. It makes me sick."

"I'm sorry I make you sick," Merry answered, with tears in her voice."

She saw Bill Erskine exactly as he was, and she was fond of him anyway. Moreover, she felt sure that it was just boun commonness to marry him.

"What other man," she often asked herself, "would have let me borrow a thousand dollars without giving him a scrap of paper to show that I'd borrowed it?"

She had come to care for Bill in a quiet, passionless way.

Not at all in the way she had cared for Tony Gaines, it is true. She never expected to feel about any man again as she had once felt about him.

The time of romantic adventure and love was gone for her forever. It had gone with him that day a year ago when she had first laid eyes on him—in the madly crowded Boylston street.

And so, with her eyes wide open, she was setting out to marry Bill Erskine, just as many another girl has set out to marry a man for a home and a living and lukewarm affection.

Bill and Marriage

"You know, Bill," she said, turning to him, "you know I hate to talk this over with you. But what can I do? I've got to know where I stand with you. Even Mona is always scolding me for letting you take up my time. She says I ought to go around with other men besides you, unless you mean business."

She sighed deeply.

"But I don't want to go 'round with any other men, Bill," she went on in a voice that was as smooth as honey.

She laid her head on his shoulder and gave him a long, slow, sullen, sweet kiss. Then another—and still another.

"No one but you, Billy-boy," she whispered, her soft lips against his. Now tell me big arms go around her, straining her close to him in the warm, excited summer darkness. And she clung to him, her face buried against his coat sleeve.

Little blaser, when I first knew you, you said you wouldn't marry the best man alive," he began, and all the resentment was gone out of his tone.

She knew from the very sound of his voice that she had won her point, and she held her breath, waiting for him to go on.

"So I took you at your word," he said. "And I was glad in a way, because I'm not exactly the marrying kind myself. But if you've changed your mind and want to get married, it's all right with me. You know I'm crazy about you and I'll do anything you want me to do. Only a man hates to feel that a girl's trying to marry him. He hates to feel that he's being roped in."

Bill Merry said nothing. She knew that she had said all there was to say.

There are times when silence is more precious than gold, and this was one of those times.

She let Bill go on talking, and when he left her under the willow tree at the gate that night he was an engaged man.

Thinks of Tony

She stood there, watching the taillight of his hired car vanish down the street and thought of a night a year ago when she had watched Tony's blue roadster disappear into the night.

Latest Discovery Dissolves Freckles

All Gone in Four Days—They Just Melt Away.

Isn't it rather odd that one discovery made almost over night will stop the worrying of millions of freckled girls and women in just a few days?

These maids and matrons have been praying for a real freckle remover for years and right now when society more than ever demands of women a skin free from blemishes and ugly brown spots Flyte is discovered.

Flyte is a cream—easy to apply—it will not injure the most delicate skin—but it will dissolve freckles in four days and melt them completely away, leaving the skin clean, clear and soft as velvet.

And best of all Flyte is not expensive—a little goes a long way. You can get it right here at the store of your druggist who guarantees it to take off every freckle or money back as do all live druggists everywhere.

Life had seemed to open up before her, in a wonderful rainbow vista, then—. But it wasn't nearly so wonderful now as she had expected it to be.

She tried to look ahead of her into the years, and could see nothing but cut-and-dried marriage with Bill Erskine. Nothing so fine, so thrilling and so wonderful in that. It was a pretty bleak outlook, as a matter of fact.

But with a little laugh she turned and went into the house.

"I guess I'd laugh, no matter what happened," she said to herself as she mounted the narrow stairs in the darkness. "If I didn't laugh, I'd cry."

She wondered why she felt so blue and downcast. She had done the thing she had set out to do. She had pinned Bill Erskine down to a proposal of marriage.

And even if she wasn't in love with him, there was no one else with whom she was in love. Then why should she feel as if getting engaged to Bill was cutting herself off from all the gay and happy and worth-while things of life? She couldn't have told why to save her soul.

But her heart was like lead in her breast as she stood before the mirror in her nightgown, brushing her bright hair and getting ready for bed.

"I guess I don't know what I want," she finally said to make up her mind, lying awake in the dark, hot little room under the eaves.

"Well, I've put it over at last Bill's going to marry me in September," she told Mona the next morning at breakfast.

"September," Mona repeated acidly, as she poured hot water into the coffee. "That's a long way off. There's many a slip between June and September. Did he give you a ring?"

Merry shook her head. "No, but he's going to send me one," she answered. "He looked as if leave town last night on a late train

No Ring Yet

Three days later she found a little square package waiting for her on the hall table when she came home at night.

"I suppose this is my engagement ring!" she said breathlessly to Mona, who had come running out of the kitchen at the sound of the screen slamming.

She tore off the brown paper wrappings with impatient fingers, and opened the little white box inside of them.

Within it was not the solitaire diamond ring that she had expected, but a platinum bracelet.

It was a beautiful piece of jewelry, thickly crusted with tiny diamonds. In the centre of it was set the smallest of small Swiss watches.

Puzzled, Merry looked at it, her poppy eyes much pursed up thoughtfully. Then she looked up at Mona questioningly.

There was a bitter smile on Mom's face.

"Quite a nice engagement ring, Merry," she said sarcastically. "It's first time I've ever heard of giving a watch for an engagement present." She had nothing but scorn for the beautiful watch bracelet.

The jeweler must have sent the wrong piece of jewelry, Merry said, frowning. "This watch must belong to someone else—and my ring has probably gone to the person the watch was intended for."

But there was no mistake about it.

The next morning came a letter from Bill Erskine.

"I am sending you a watch bracelet," he wrote, "it's about the prettiest thing of its kind that I've ever seen and I know that you did not have a watch. I'll see you soon. Bill."

He made no mention of the ring he had promised her. Neither did he mention their engagement, nor send his love to her.

"Funny," thought Merry, turning the short, curt little note over and over in her hands. "He said he was going to send a ring, I know." They had been even more than engaged, and she had told him she wanted a square diamond set in platinum.

Bill Is Queer

She did not hear from him again for ten days, and then he did not write. He sent her a five-pound box of dried fruits, with his card in it.

Merry turned up her dainty little nose at them, but Mona and Lillie enjoyed them immensely, and Lillie gained two more pounds before the box was empty.

"What's the matter with you, Lydia Languish?" Jimmy asked Merry one Sunday afternoon in late August. "You look as blue as the sky of Naples."

They were sitting behind the currant bushes in the back yard so that Jimmy could smoke without Moms seeing her. She took a cigaret from her little leather case now, tossed it into the air and caught it between her lips.

"Well, I am blue, too," Merry confessed with a long, unhappy sigh. "Here it is the last week in August and I haven't heard from Bill for two weeks. We were going to be married the first of September—but I'm afraid to go ahead and buy my wedding dress and make plans for a wedding. He said most of it we weren't even engaged lately."

Her lovely apple-blossom face was dark with discontent, and she kicked the grass with her sharp little French heels, as she talked.

"Sometimes I think that men don't ever want to be married," she went on irritably. "Just think how Cassie worked for years to get Morley Kaufman to the point where he'd marry her—"

Merry Angry

"Oh, banana oil!" Jinny broke in, in her quick, sudden little way. "Of course men want to get married just the same as girls do! The trouble with Cassie and Morley Kaufman was that Morley wasn't crazy about her. He didn't want to marry Cassie, but Cassie just wore him down—and now look at 'em! They fight like cats and dogs all the time. If this Erskine doesn't want to marry you, for Pete's sake, let him go. You don't want to live the way Cassie does, do you?"

Merry shrugged her shoulders, and felt a long black of gram in two.

"Oh, I don't know," she answered with a yawn. "I know I'm terribly sick of that beauty shop and Lillie's chit-chat all day long. I wish I'd never gone into the place.

It had seemed a good thing to go into a year ago.

but you can get too much of even a good thing, when you have it forced in and day out. Too much of the insistent telephone. Too much of the vain, foolish middle-aged women customers who wanted to be bobbed and manaaged and cold-creamed into a semblance of their lost youth.

Merry was sick of the shop, to the point of nausea.

What she wanted now was to get married and live the way Cassie lived. She wanted to dress the way Cassie and Muriel Kaufman dressed. She wanted to give little parties in her own home. She wanted to spend her mornings shopping and her afternoons playing bridge—as Cassie and Muriel spent them.

In short, she had reached that dangerous time when a girl wants to marry and settle down. That time when nothing looks so good to her as a plain platinum wedding ring, and the word "Mrs." engraved on her calling cards.

And all she had was the beauty shop, the gloomy apartment, Lillie and Moms, and an occasional letter from Bill Erskine.

"I wonder what he thinks he's doing to me?" she thought with a sudden flurry of anger. "I wonder if he thinks he can ask me to marry him and then forget all about it! I'll show him—"

She scrambled up, from the grass where she was lying flat on her stomach, and ran into the house for paper and fountain pen. She would write to Bill Erskine that very afternoon! She would ask him for a list of people to whom he'd like to send wedding announcements!

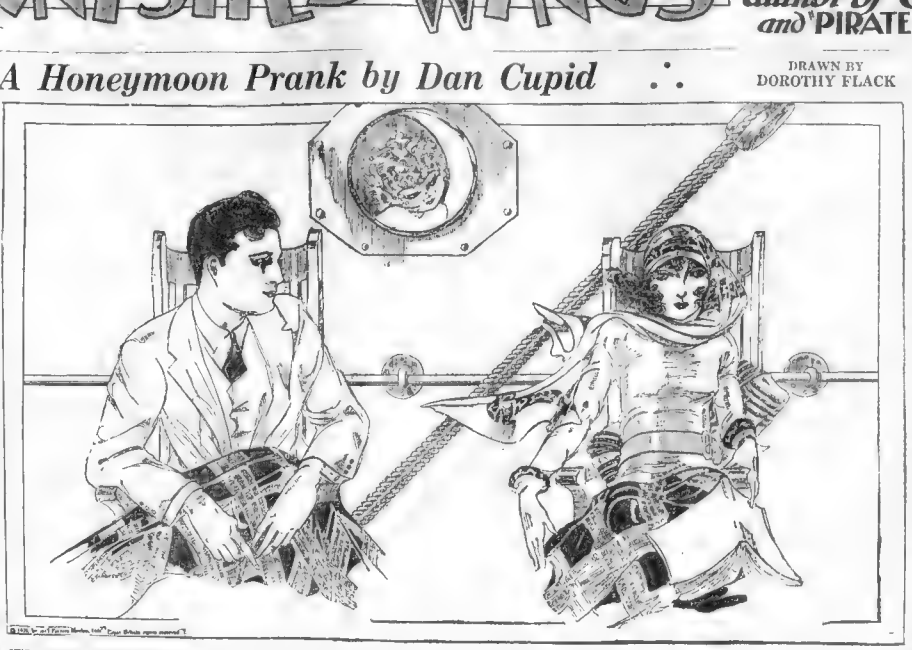
"That," she said to herself, biting the end of her pen, "ought to give some sign of life out of him, certainly!"

TO BE CONTINUED.

What did Merry write to Bill, and why didn't she mail the letter? You will find out in tomorrow's installment of Tarnished Wings.

A Honeymoon Prank by Dan Cupid

DRAWN BY DOROTHY FLACK



IT'S a tragedy, that's what it is! Just think, they've actually quarrelled on their honeymoon! They've been having such a glorious, wonderful time and now along comes this silly quarrel and spoils everything. Of course, it won't, it can't last very long, but it's heart-breaking while it does last.

Oh, dear, why doesn't he speak to her? Just one little word and it would be all over. And he's thinking exactly the same thing, yet neither of them is willing to be the first to give in.

But, let me whisper -Dan sometimes sends these little quarrels to test you both, so just show him that you're stronger than mere words and that you're not going to let these things come up. It's hard, I know, but if you keep on this way you're in a fair way to spoil your whole life.

Keep out the quarrel and let Love govern your life, for then you'll ever preserve the happiness which has been yours in these joyous days of the honeymoon Who knows but that this "love-spat" is but a blessing in disguise, for it will teach you the utter futility of foolish quarrelling and show you the way to avoid it and keep Dan Cupid ever dwelling in your heart to make your life one long honeymoon.

"The Taxi Dancer," a Story of Night Clubs

which was pleasantly tingled with savory odors. They were led to a table near a space cleared for dancing.

"You can get it here," Kittie told her, as they were seated. "I'm taking Bacardi, Lee."

Refuses Drink.

The lights, the newness of the surroundings and the pulsating music of the orchestra immediately stimulated Joslyn beyond any necessity for alcohol. Her dark eyes began to glow. Time, now, had the flavor of freedom, the gloss of the life for which her soul had thirsted. It was as though she had entered into some melodious, velvety realm of the senses . . . home . . . the rooming house . . . poverty . . . were receding ghosts vanishing into dim, distant shadows.

"Aw, she's blotto already," Joslyn heard Kittie saying. "Sure she'll take Bacardi, too."

Rogers conversed quietly with a waiter regarding the menu and that necessity finished he came back to Lee's ear with an air of lazy impersonal good spirits. More than half of his conversation was directed to Joslyn; his eye roved over the people at the other tables and he identified several as persons of prominence. Cocktails were served and Joslyn, for politeness, sipped hers.

"You don't care for this stuff, Miss Poe?" Rogers asked, a hint of cynicism at the corners of his mouth.

"Well, I never did drink much at home," Joslyn confessed. "Of course, we always had egg nog at Christmas time, and punch — it was usually spiked — at the parties."

Kittie gulped, strangled mildly. "Oh, Lord!" she gasped.

"Friend Kittie," said Rogers, regarding her slowly, "seems actor fished. You'll really have to learn to drink, Miss Poe, if you hope to get any fun out of those places. I'm assuming, of course, that you want to play the game."

"I'm not sure I know what you mean — by playing the game, Joslyn said, with a feeling that Rogers was somehow embittered.

"Oh, jazz and hootch and sweeties and all the rest of it," he elucidated negligently. "Those are the ingredients that seem to make up this sort of thing — the New York cocktail. I suppose you couldn't stand the deadly monotony of home, Miss Poe—the stupid people you'd known all your life — the usual collections?"

"I wanted my freedom—yes!" Joslyn's eyes flashed.

A sardonic smile quirked the man's lips. "Well, since you've found your freedom, you might as well finish up your drink and have another."

"Aha, boy!" murmured Kittie. Joslyn pushed her glass an inch or two from her plate.

"I'm afraid you don't understand me, Mr. Rogers," she said, somewhat coldly.

"I'm sorry," he said, smoothly polite.

Kelvin Comes In

The trio at the table became aware, suddenly, that a fourth person, a flushed, rakish young man, had come up and was standing at their table. His eyes were bold, dark, handsome; he was immaculate in evening clothes, his features regular, as though they had been cut with a stencil, his hair glossy black with a slight wave.

"I beg your pardon. . ." His voice was masculine, charged with personality. "Unless I am mistaken—"

Lee Rogers had risen. The stranger's humid eyes were fixed on Joslyn's face.

"Unless I am mistaken, I have met this young lady before. I think a mutual friend introduced us."

"Why, it's James Kelvin, the movie star!" This from Kittie.

"That is the name—Kelvin," he said, pointedly, to Joslyn. "I wonder if I might have this dance." His penetrating gaze held her eyes to his own.

The voice of Lee Rogers cut briefly across the table.

"Do you know Mr. Kelvin, Miss Poe?" he asked.

"No, I don't," said Joslyn, her heart beating faster. "I've seen him on the screen, I think, and that's all."

"Kelvin," Rogers said telly, "beat it—on your way. Get gone. Don't try to put up any argument—git."

James Kelvins eyes drifted to the speaker's face. "Suppose you," he said, contentiously, "try to throw me out."

Lee Rogers stood motionless, his face set stone-like, his eyes alert and cold. The flush on James Kelvin's handsome face deepened with baked, passionate fury. The men were about of a size, they thought it would be Kelvin who would relish the fury of attack. Rogers would be deliberate but effective.

"You heard what I said, Kelvin," he stated levelly. "You can't butt in at this stable and pull your quick stuff. The lady doesn't know you. She doesn't want to know you. Is that clear enough?"

Joslyn Stops Kelvin

Kelvin's expression became satanic! there was a clash between him and Rogers—with one hand he arrest it aside.

"Why, damn you!" he grated, "I'll push your damn face in!"

Joslyn surged, leaped in Joslyn's breast. The cold, watchful repression of Lee Rogers was fright with menace . . . a moment of stillness.

Suddenly, alarmingly, Joslyn felt her gray crystallize into sympathy—for Kelvin! His emotion, like heat, had penetrated her until every nerve was quivering. Without knowing why, Joslyn blushed scarlet.

Kelvin clenched a fist and stepped forward, his torso poised and balanced like a pugilist's. Joslyn suffered complete inertia; there was a hand and seized he wrist. The contact was vital, magnetically alive—like electricity.

"Don't—please, please go away."

Her voice was scarcely more than a whisper Kelvin froze instantly to strained immobility.

"You want me to go away?"

"Yes, oh, yes—please go away!"

Two men, older than Kelvin, came hurrying up. They took him by the arms, put subtly deferential hands on his coat lapels. "Nix, Jim...., lay off the rough stuff, boy...." Over a shoulder one of them shot a hasty apology to Rogers. "Pay no attention to him...drinking—a little edged...."

Kelvin's fingers relaxed their grip. Swaying a little between his friends, Kelvin looked down at her, possessively.

"All right—I'll go away," he agreed slowly. "Sorry I should have caused a scene. Some other time ....don't forget....got to meet you...."

For an instant his eyes held Joslyn's compellingly. Even under the embarrassing circumstances she was disconcertingly aware of a jeshed force in the man's personality of his alarming power to unstring her nerves, to disorganize her poise, to flood her of color, seriously like nausea, dyed her cheeks.

"If—if you ever speak to me again I'll—I'll call a policeman!" The words stumbled with confused indignation. Kelvin attempted a bow, but was pulled away unsteadily by his friends.

Rogers, as he dropped back into his chair, studied Joslyn with curious eyes and she had a shamefaced fear that he had sensed by some mysterious insight, her humiliating sensations.

"In case you are ever tempted to fall for Kelvin," he said in his cold, logical voice, "it might be well for you to know — at the start—that Kelvin is a pretty bad egg. Women have spoiled him, and he's too high-powered for comfort. Too much always under pressure. Some day he'll explode and destroy himself and whoever else happens to be around. It's a shame too; he's one of the few movie stars with real talent."

The crimson was slowly fading from Joslyn's face, leaving her hurt and pale in energy. "I can't tell you how cheap and common all this makes me feel, Mr. Rogers," she said defensively. "Of course, I did nothing to encourage him, but—"

"That is not to be expected. I need any encouragement. He'll get along!"

"And so will Miss Poe," declared Rogers with warmth, for the first time, in his voice. "But she'll have many experiences like this. The unfortunate thing for her is that she has a superabundance of that highly disturbing magnetism which makes fools out of men. You're aware of it, I suppose, Miss Poe?"

Give Appeal.

"Sure, she knows she's got the stuff—it's simply the old sex appeal you read about," declared frankly. "Any girl that's known it. Some people call it by the name of a movie."

handle it wrong. It's what makes a girl a star on Broadway, and also a lot of bums. I got some of it myself, but if I had the kick in me that Joslyn has, I'd quit manicuring forever. And I wouldn't be a bum either."

The conversation—the whole evening—had drifted into strange, uncharted waters for Joslyn. Uncertainly, a shadow of bewilderment clouded her eyes, her lips fell naturally dry.

"Now, if I was Joslyn," Kittie Lane rambled on, "and that snappy James Kelvin fell for me—well, I'd pay right up to him. Somebody's going to slip him the halter and lead him to the altar sometime. Stranger things have happened. Can you imagine it—he's got a face that's as well known as Valentino and it's worth a fortune. He is as familiar to the public as Coolidge, and look at the dough they hold drag. Joslyn here gets the breaks and he falls for her but is she wise enough to do a bout herself in? I am so...."

Joslyn and Lee Rogers could not help smiling. Kittie looked at them both a bit impatiently.

"All right—laugh it off," she grumbled. "But all the same you had him hooked hard. You can't..."

Joslyn felt the steady gaze of Lee Rogers pulling her own. His eyes were studying her face with a level worldly intensity. Then, unexpectedly, he put his hand across the table.

"Our little friend Kittie speaks appleasure very fluently," he said gravely. "She means well and you could do worse than to follow somebody . . . like a brother, if that time ever comes to you, Joslyn Poe, I want you to hunt me up. Let's shake hands on that."

Joslyn put her hand in the palm before her, his grip was firm, but kind. In a flash even then she knew that a snap of electric smoke ran out one corner of her little rouged mouth.

"Another good man gone wrong," she murmured.

MAKING OF A HUSBAND

By Ann Lisle

"DID you know there was a later will?" the Sheriff asked—seemingly of space.

There was no word from Nick. But Zeke Schmidt and May replied with one accord:

"Yes. We have known."

"But you didn't know on day you came to see me, May?" I protested.

"What day was that?" asked the Sheriff.

"The day before my wedding. I was," May replied tranquilly.

"How come you was discussing your granddad's will with Miss Harrison?" the Sheriff demanded.

Zeke made a sign for silence, but May was so overawed by the law and by the sense that she had become important to an official of that way that she either did not care to hear it, for she cried out eagerly:

"It is so close to Mrs. Harrison I feel that I go to her as if I am always her friend and not first her maid. I tell her my Zeke he is proud that I am grand chile from Dr. White and how it is he want I shall claim."

"Claim what?" demanded Nicholas Perry a tavely.

"The rightful heritage," Zeke said bluntly and a little grandiloquently, as if bound to make May's rash statement a factor for his advantage, not his annoyance.

"So you was planning to fight the will for May only the day afore your wedding?" the sheriff demanded.

"Yes," said Zeke with a touch of surliness.

"And how about Arlette?" asked McCandless.

"For her too," said Zeke.

"Just answer them and now you hev found out that it aint Perry you got to fight," the sheriff surmised pleasantly.

"All it do you mean?" Zeke asked belligerently.

"Ain't I plain enough?" asked McCandless.

"We hef found out there is a new will," said Zeke. "What has that to do with it that Arlette she is not seen?"

"That's what I want to know," the sheriff said pleasantly. "If you think someone should told you about this new will on the very day of your wedding—"

"Sheriff, it would die for Arlette," protested May. "Mrs. Harrison, she will tell you how it is I have stole for her—"

Zeke couldn't stop her. Before I could say a word in the bride's defense or explain her rash words the sheriff spoke up grimly:

"Are you sure?" the sheriff asked searchingly. "Seems to me you are a little too anxious to claim you don't know when was the time. If you didn't know, you wouldn't know how it will looks for you two that you knew when was the time. If you, Zeke, got a claim on the estate by marrying May—and when the both of you knew that the new will makes Arlette stand more in the way of your rights than ever this here Perry could have stood seeing it ain't no blood kin."

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

OUTSIDE of flies and ants, the worst pests in this world are people who make social calls. The fellow who is always taking up a collection every time a stenographer leaves the office.

LOTS of girls feel ill at ease in church that they get relieved just for the donations.

IT'S getting so that some man won't marry a stenographer who works in a small office. The collections won't be large enough.

WHEN a man spends $3 for a license he wants a big return on his investment.

THESE collections used to be taken up as a surprise to the bride, but the only time a bride is surprised nowadays is when she doesn't get anything.

MOST women not only expect it, they demand it.

ONCE girl got engaged to a man for the subscription.

AND after the last dollar was in she broke the engagement.

BUT she finally had to marry some other man to keep from giving it money back.

AFTER buying a wedding trousseau and taking a honeymoon she had enough dough left over to pay for the divorce.

WHENEVER a stenographer falls in love it costs you anywhere from $1 to ten bucks.

THE only way you can save the dollar is by marrying the girl yourself.

ONE man had to donate so much money every day that he's afraid to go to work.

HE gets his wallet ready every time he sees one of the stenographers flirting with somebody.

HE says the next time he buys a suit he's going to have the trousers made one-way pockets. He thinks that ought to relieve some of the traffic.

A fellow doesn't know what to do. If you don't give anything, you're cheap, and if you do give something, you're broke.

PESTS who take up collections are more annoying than mosquitos. A mosquito may bite, but he never stings you in the wallet.

DAILY SHORT STORY

SISTER JENNY

By Bertha R. McDonald

JENNY LYNN was pretty sure that her prospective brother-in-law was a philanderer. She also sensed soon after his engagement to her little sister Grace that he was something of a coward, but Grace adored the man and Jenny would go to almost any length to secure the happiness of this sister whom her mother in passing had laid in her arms and asked her to care for.

John Poole was a handsome man; the type that captures girls' hearts in spite of them and he knew thoroughly his power over women. When he married little Grace Lynn, he refused to live with her and Jenny in the old Lynn home. Insulting rather upon setting up an establishment of their own at the extreme other end of the little city.

Jenny might have admired him for this if she had not been so sure that his object was mostly to remove himself and Grace from the neighborhood where the older sister as further

The first [illegible] ture came some time after it became that Poole would shortly don the mantle of parenthood. Instead of being pleased over this prospect, as most young husbands are he was nettled.

As the days [illegible] into months and Grace [illegible] lost her delicate appeal [illegible] and a bewildering, he indulged more freely his admiration for the eternal feminine, generally speaking.

As usual, it was Jenny who discovered when his interests became less general and more personal and when she learned that the shining recipient was Grace's dearest friend, Gertie Collins, her sisterly soul fumed with righteous indignation.

The coming event gave her an excuse to spend more time with Grace than she had since [illegible] and when and how Poole [illegible] cused himself from being at home; learned too of his favorite rendezvous with Gertie Collins.

It was midsummer and the shrubs in the little recreation park were thick and luxuriant with foliage. It was easy enough to find an unoccupied secluded bench most any time for surreptitious wooing.

Jenny spent much time and thought on a way to meet this growing menace. One moonlight evening when John had phoned Grace that he would not be home for supper, nor until very late, she suggested that Grace send for her friend, Gertie Collins. To spend the evening with her, and when a maid in the Collins home gave out the information that the daughter of the house was out, Jenny decided that it was time to act.

Jenny slipped out of the house clad only in an old coat and a hat belonging to Grace, and in her pocket she carried a shiny new revolver she had been treasuring for the very occasion.

Stepping quietly into the dark, she stole nearer and nearer to the bench which she knew her recreant brother-in-law and his inamorata were wont to frequent. Then noiselessly enclosing herself directly behind a heavy, clumpy shrub just at the right of the bench, she awaited developments.

"You're such a saucy, tempting little witch, Gert," Poole was murmuring in a low, seductive voice to his lady fair.

He was interrupted by a resulting movement in the adjacent thicket and looked up in astonishment to see the moonlight glistening upon the barrel of a gun held by a [illegible] seen hand. The next moment was almost paralyzed with fear a voice, low [illegible] he knew all too well

"Sit perfectly still, John Poole. If you or Gertie make one move to get away from what I'm going to say to you, I'll pepper you both with bullets.

"I'm not acting for myself. I'm pleading for my unborn child. That child will need its father and it is going to have him or I'll know the reason why. Gertie, you've got to promise to shake the dust of this town off your feet the first thing tomorrow morning. Do you promise—"

A dramatic silence from the bench was the only answer.

"Say it—promise—this minute—or I'll shoot!"

"I—I—promise!"

"Along then and if I ever [illegible] trying to speak or [illegible] with my husband in [illegible] I'll kill you both in [illegible] Move!"

[illegible] jumped up from the bench in the depths of the shrubbery as though she had already been shot and the moment her feet struck the gravelled path, broke into a mad run.

"As for you, John," the voice went on, "you can sit right where you are for another half hour or so and repent of your sins. You didn't think I had it in me, did you? Well, there are a lot more surprises in store for you, of which this isn't the least. For one thing, we're going to move back home where Jenny can help me keep an eye on you and if you ever breathe a word of this night's work to a living soul I'll tell her the whole truth. I'm going home now and go to bed."

When he went home an hour later, Grace was sleeping innocently, one pink cheek pillowed against her arm. Involuntarily he stooped and kissed her. She stirred restlessly and muttered sleepily, "I—love you."

GEE ITS FUNNY HOW I GET SUCH GREAT IDEAS. ALL OF A SODDEN, I THINK OF MAKIN' SKINNY GET A NICKEL TO TOSS UP TO SEE WHETHER IT WILL BE BLOOD OR RED INK. AND —
NOW I GOT A SCHEME ALL COOKED UP SO'S I'LL BE SURE NOT TO LOSE THE TOSS AND THEN I GOT IT FIGGERED HOW I CAN MAKE HIM SHOOT THE PIEE FOR CHOCOLATE. AND — "HEY SKINNY"!! DID YA GET IT?
GOSH, I CAN'T GET A NICKEL TO TOSS UP - I CAN'T EVEN GET A PENNY
HOW DARE YOU DISAPPOINT ME! HOW DARE YOU!
WHY DONT YOU GET THE NICKEL TO TOSS UP?
THAT JUST SHOWS YOU! - YOU AINT GIVIN ME A SQUARE DEAL, YOU'RE TRYIN TO MAKE A SUCKER OUTA ME!
AFTER I GO AND THINK UP THE IDEA, YOU WANT ME TO GET THE NICKEL TOO! - THAT JUST SHOWS YOU AINT MY PAL. SUPPOSIN IT WAS DIFFERENT, - DO YOU THINK I WOULD DO A THING LIKE THAT!
WELL BET ANYTHING THAT SKINNY WILL HAVE THAT NICKEL TO-MORROW!

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

ON 364 days of the year a man may be the most devoted, thoughtful and tender husband in the world, a paragon of all the seven deadly virtues.

* * *

But, on his wedding anniversary, he will always elect to start something!

It seems to be written in the Book of Fate that no woman shall ever extract any joy from an anniversary, as long as a man can find a way to spoil it.

* * *

And there appear to be at least ninety-nine ways in which any husband can spoil any anniversary.

He may forget it, altogether.

He may suddenly remember it at the last moment and rush out and buy you something which is an exact duplicate of the foolish thing he bought you last year.

Or, he may begin "celebrating" early in the morning, and never reach home till midnight.

He may stop at the florist's and order your favorite flowers sent up—and forgot to tell the clerk not to enclose the bill.

He may dutifully don his evening clothes and take you to a show—and then doze peacefully beside you all evening.

He may order a table and a special dinner at the best restaurant in town—and then start a quarrel with the waiter, which lasts from the soup to the demi-tasse.

He may drive you down to the shore—and spend the entire day sitting up the flappers on the boardwalk or the bathing beauties on the beach.

He may suggest a picnic in the country with a basket luncheon—and then gorge himself with cold ham and lemon pie until he goes into a coma or develops indigestion or a grouch that lasts all afternoon.

* * *

Or, at the end of a thrilling day spent in one of your old sentimental haunts, he may drive home in the moonlight, and forget to kiss you.

He is like a woman learning to drive a motor car. No matter how hard he tries to keep to the smooth, safe track, if there happens to be one rocky place in the road he will smash into it.

The only sure way to enjoy an anniversary is to order the flowers and bon-bons yourself—and then go off somewhere in the attic, alone, and read over his old love-letters.

For, alas, to a woman, an anniversary is a day of sentiment and rosemary—an immortelle in the garden of Memory. But to a man, it is like the annual hay-fever or the spring housecleaning—just some thing to be "gotten over with."

One Peril of Motoring Overcome

The very real danger of a coarsened skin that is taking a terrible toll of beauty amongst American women who drive their machines through dust, wind and sun, has been eliminated. Velouderma (Velvet Skin) has arrived! Use it just after motoring and preserve the soft, velvet loveliness of your skin. It disappears in a minute, but leaves your face cool, soothed and fragrant. Velouderma is marvelous for sunburn, for hands roughened by housework, as a powder base and to relieve the chafing of infants. On sale at all department and good drug stores, 25c a tube. New England representatives, Howley-White Co., Boston, Mass.

TWO FAMOUS WOMEN BORN IN SAME YEAR

Queen Victoria and Lydia E. Pinkham

MRS. ANNA McHENRY
1009 E. PLUM STREET, MARSHALL, ILLINOIS

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far-reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in thousands of American homes.

Marshall, Illinois.—"After my second child was born, I never saw a well day for five years. My father was telling his druggist about my condition, and the druggist insisted that father take a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have me try it, as it had helped his wife. I had given up, but to please father and mother, I commenced taking your medicine and in a week I had begun to feel better. When I passed through the Change of Life, I was taking the Vegetable Compound and I had no trouble of any kind."—Mrs. Anna McHenry, 1005 E. Plum St., Marshall, Illinois.

Another Woman Helped

Philadelphia, Penna.—Mrs. Caroline Nagy, of 2717 Sears St., in a recent letter to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co, says that after her child was born she was in a very weak condition. She could not seem to regain her health and went to her mother for advice. She told her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it had helped her when in like condition, and it has helped her mother also. So Mrs. Nagy started taking it. She felt better after taking the first bottle,—after taking six bottles her weakness and other troubles disappeared, and she is never done praising the Compound.

In some families the fourth generation is learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HOOSAC BORE TO BE BROUGHT UP TO DATE

By FRANK H. MELOON.
Financial Editor.

To many Boston business men it seems like only a few years ago when the Hoosac Tunnel, wonder of its day, was completed and turned over to the old Fitchburg Railroad, yet 1926 is commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of its completion, with a toll of 136 men in 1,111 days while on the job. The Mount

Homer Loring

Tunnel, under the Alps, cost the lives of nearly a thousand men. Modern engineering, we believe, is far more careful of human life. Chairman Homer Loring of the Boston & Maine, of which the bore through the Hoosac Mountain is now a part, will see that the anniversary is fittingly celebrated by enlargement of the tunnel to permit the passage of freight trains, some of the cars of which are being built considerably larger than they were when the tunnel was built.

The contractors who did the work are Hooker Tunnel were Jos. Munson Brothers of Boston, who also built many of the first railroads in New England and New York, and filled in the Back Bay. Miss Nellie Munson—Norman Hooker, Jr.'s daughter—and his niece, Lillian Munson, later Mrs. William Thiel, widow of a former editor of the Boston Journal, who is still living in Boston, went through the tunnel on a flat car, attired in the first train to make the trip.

The names of the engineers who planned the tunnel appear last in obscurity. This reminds us that, when the South Station was built, the names of many connected with the project were cut into the marble on the Dewey square entrance. When the present "station" was made their appearance these names were hidden behind new construction, and no one seemed to care.

Colonel E. H. Green of South Dartmouth, son of the late Hetty Green, is performing a noteworthy task in preparation for the sailing date of Mr. Morgan for inspection by prominent generations. In this column we have frequently pointed out the importance of our old wh

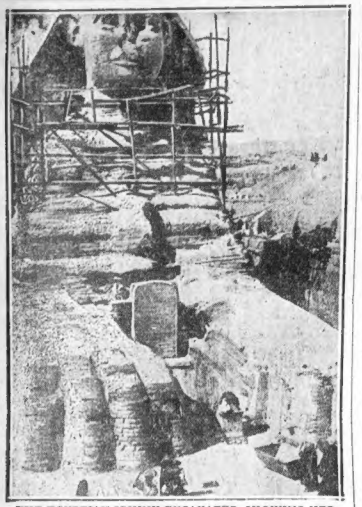
The Old Sphinx of Egypt

How She Looked Originally



THE EGYPTIAN SPHINX EXCAVATED, SHOWING HER HUGE PAWS.

The discovery of photography, as Ruskin predicted, was destined to educate the human race, making everybody familiar with the most interesting, extraordinary and beautiful things on earth. The moving picture has gone many steps farther in the line of education, showing not only still life, but moving life, THE WORLD IN MOTION.

Nearly every child, thanks to photography, is familiar with the great Egyptian Sphinx, raising its head above the sands and looking over toward the Great Pyramids. But recently the sands have been dug away, showing the gigantic paws of the Sphinx, and here you see that fabulous monster of olden times as she looks now.

When the excavating was done, the Sphinx was restored carefully with concrete, and she will last to enlighten and impress many centuries of human beings.

The tiny human beings in this picture show you how gigantic is this ancient Egyptian monument. If you could see the Sphinx's head and profile, you would notice one interesting fact—that the face shows the features of an African negro, proving that at one time men of Ethiopian race ruled in Egypt, and there built gigantic monuments.

Before Art had been developed, those that wanted to "express themselves" resorted to "BIGNESS." If they could make a pyramid or a statue BIG enough, they felt that they had done wonders. This is one of the world's biggest statues, perhaps the biggest.

But it hasn't the power, with all its BIGNESS, of the smallest, well-made statue of Pericles, or the power of one powerful line from Shakespeare, or any other great poet.

The Sphinx, as you know, was supposed to be a real, living creature, with the head, neck and breast of a woman, the body and sharp tearing claws of a wild beast. To every stranger she put the same riddle, and when they could not answer, tore them to pieces.

When the riddle was solved, WHICH any twelve-year-old boy might have solved, the half lady Sphinx killed herself. The riddle was, "What is it that goes on four legs, on two legs, and on three legs?"

The answer, of course, is a human being. On four legs as a baby, on two legs in full strength, on three legs with a cane as an old man.

Judicial Reform

Our Sophisticated Age Prefers Intricacies

This time of year is usually distinguished by pleasant meetings of able folk who discuss, adopt and then forget resolutions for the improvement of this or that.

We are not, therefore, surprised or especially thrilled that the American Bar Association has once more urged that justice be made easier and cheaper.

Bad faith need not be imputed to anybody because these lofty ideals are not realized. Certainly members of the legal profession are not more to blame for delay in legal reform than their clients are.

The fact seems to be that what most persons want when they go to law isn't justice at all, but something very different—advantage, exemption, revenge.

If the demand were for justice it could be met rather readily by simply bringing the persons in interest together, having them clear their thoughts upon the matters at issue and then allowing neutral opinion to strike a common denominator.

That is how human justice is roughly arrived at in primitive communities when the desire for it is inherent and strong.

Our sophisticated age prefers intricacies, subtleties, a maze of costly technicalities and, to save its face, a succession of appellate steps which lead slowly, if at all, to a bettered sense of right.

While it insists on so much hocus-pocus, it must expect to pay the bill.

SENTIMENT AT ODDS WITH SANITATION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A GENTLEMAN in California who knew some of the original characters in Helen Hunt Jackson's "Ramona" contributes an interesting twist to one phase of the story.

The part where the Indian, Allessandro, and his bride are ejected from the house where they are living has caused the anger of a host of fiction lovers.

The reason they were put out, says this gentleman, was not because of spite on the part of the landlord, but because the house was kept in such a filthy condition that it was unsanitary and a menace to the community.

Besides showing that there are two sides to every story this illustrates a curious fact in human history; namely, that sentiment and sanitation have been often at odds.

Sentiment clings to the unsanitary as firmly as the sanitary and fiercely opposes any change.

Those who live in slums are the ones who most strenuously object to any alteration for the betterment of health conditions.

When oil lamps, lessening the strain on the eyes and bettering the condition of health, were first introduced into England they were attacked by the literary men of London on the grounds that they took the sentiment out of life. Candles were associated with the romantic past. Oil lamps were a monstrosity of the present.

Ever the past holds the interest of sentiment and new improvements seem to be destroying it.

To the average American, Spain is a land of romance. It is thought of in terms of moonlight, twinkling guitars, playing fountains, "La Paloma," and beautiful black-haired Carmens with red roses in their teeth.

Former Ambassador Alexander P. Moore, who just returned from this land of romance, says the lowliest American laborer lives more luxuriously and possesses greater conveniences than the grandest Spanish grandee.

The mundane considerations of running water, bathtubs, plumbing, and such things, which make life better and more healthful seem out of the realm of sentiment.

But they are part of the basis upon which humanity progresses, and where sentiment stands in the way of such progress it has to give way in the end.

HOW TO MAKE GOOD BOYS OUT OF BAD BOYS

You can't tell by a mischievous lad what sort of a man he will become. Some of the devilries of boys are not looked upon by them in the light of wrong-doing. It is variety and fun they are after.

Life and restraint seem monotonous, so they break out in some way that is called disgraceful.

Perhaps they did not intend to go too far, but after getting things started they could not stop till damage was done. Then came reprimands and possibly punishment.

The more active a boy's mind the busier his hands must be kept. If your boy heads the honor roll in his studies make him head something in clean athletics.

Fresh air exercise is better than stuffy gym work.

But exercise there should be plenty of it.

Lots of times the "bad boy" of the neighborhood existed only in your own mind—it was lack of something to do which led to depredations. It has been proved that a public playground, tennis court or baseball diamond is sometimes all that "bad boys" need to make them good.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WE were loking for a house, my friend and I. All afternoon we had walked through empty rooms. It was a Summer day, with a smoky golden mist veiling the light. In the neglected yards, back of the empty houses, honeysuckle was tangled with the sprawling hedges of red roses and nasturtiums. The scent of it drifted down the echoing halls and clung like a ghost to the faded wall paper. The rooms were filled with the lazy amber light and the muttering of streets like a warm, slow surf beating on the sun-drenched rocks.

Bare rooms, filled with golden light, the dusty fragrance of a honeysuckle hedge, and faint sounds that stirred and moved and slept again—it was lovely! There was such freedom in those rooms. They were like the hearts of calm, kind people who are not in a hurry. Those empty rooms were gracious to us as we entered—we two fussy, hurried little mortals looking for a house. They did not press upon us or nag us with their own fussiness. They had no fussiness. They were clear and often and at peace. Even the shabbiest of those empty rooms had a serene dignity.

"How different houses look when they empty?" I said to my friend. "We always talk about 'fixing up' a house. But I am not sure that we improve houses when we fix them up. It seems to me that these bare rooms are much more beautiful, much more significant, than the average furnished room.

Bare Lives

"Bare rooms are always lovely," said my friend, whose heart is very sensitive to lovely things.

Bare lives, too—I wonder if our lives aren't more beautiful when they are bare?

We feel that we must pile a multitude of experiences, possessions and poses into life. We must BE something. We must get somewhere. We must LIVE. But is all this hustling and scurrying about "living"? Isn't it merely fussiness?

Once I lived on the desert and knew the desert people well. Their lives were truly bare. The intense heat, the isolation and poverty had reduced their domestic program to the simplest terms. The program of their lives was also intensely simplified. They were born, they ripened into love, they mated, gave birth, toiled, saw death and finally went to rest. Startling events did not happen in that place. They did not have excitements and affairs. They moved through life in free, slow simple gestures as the great circling buzzards move through that vast and silent sky. Surely a "bare" life.

Gaunt and Vivid

Yet I have never sensed the values of life as acutely or as colorfully as I did there in that desert. Life was as gaunt as one great carved sand mesa which rose alone in a hundred miles of space. But it was also as vivid. There were few experiences, but they flamed. People were more real. They were not nervous, thin shadows as city people are. You could see all around them. They and their lives had meaning and substance.

I MUST SEE THE HAIR-DRESSER & TAKE IN THAT FASHION SHOW & GO TO AMY'S BRIDGE PARTY & GET MY FORTUNE TOLD & HAVE MY FACE LIFTED-etc-etc.
CLUTTERED LIVES.
E.R.

They were "bare," but it was the bareness of freedom, strength and honesty. THEY HAD ROOM TO BE THEMSELVES.

I wonder how many of us have space to be ourselves in our crowded lives! We are like cluttered rooms. Originally the room was bare—a place of ease and dignity. An honest, simple place. Then it grew filled with furnishings. Dusty, gaudy bits. Clumsy, tiresome furniture. Silly draperies that shut out the light. Jumble of bric-a-brac ornamental and table to confuse and bother the senses. And all the serenity and freedom of the room gone.

So we confuse our own lives and curtail our freedom. We fill our lives with trivial emotions, trashy friends, meaningless experiences. Soon there is no meaning left in anything—no time for anything—"no room to move around."

EVOLUTION, SOCIETY AND POLITICS

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

SOME would say that the changed development of human character in civilized society since the World War almost equals one of those "mutations" about which biologists are so much concerned with reference to their bearing on the origin of species.

Certain it is that millions of men and women have suddenly found themselves placed at unexpectedly new viewpoints ever life, and old-fashioned people rub their eyes in astonishment and dismay. To many of them the world seems to have been changed overnight, and they feel as if the very foundations of the old order had crumbled into dust.

At such a juncture the science of life assumes a more vivid interest for everybody, and that science now more than ever bases itself on the principles of evolution.

But evolution itself, as a doctrine growing out of human experience, is subject to the universal upheaval, and we see its leaders, while clinging firmly to the fundamental idea of evolution, abandoning old holds and seeking new ones.

This in no sense is condemnatory of their science—on the contrary, it is a proof of sincerity, but naturally the enemies of evolution seize upon it as an apparently good point of attack.

Great Difference

Nothing is to be gained by any attempt to turn attention away from the discrepancies that have developed in the details of evolutionary theory. It is far wiser that they should be frankly and plainly stated.

In that way the profound difference in spirit and method between evolutionists and their theological opponents is conspicuously brought out.

Only two or three years ago, Professor William Bateson rather dismayed some weak-kneed supporters of evolution by an avowal of this kind, which coming just when the crusade against evolution was warming up, produced an effect that probably astonished no one more than Professor Bateson himself.

He thought that he was addressing only technical scientists, but found out that the great body of intelligent newspaper readers had been listening; and so explanations, by himself and other evolutionists, were in order.

This incident has had strong repercussions ever since. It played its part in the famous Kentucky trial.

Professor Bateson has since died, and recently Professor T. H. Morgan, of Columbia University, in a brief sketch in "Science" has clearly indicated the attitude of Bateson toward Darwin's theory of natural selection as an explanation of the origin of species. Bateson was an independent thinker, not to be daunted by the greatness of anybody's reputation for "authority."

Without casting the slightest doubt upon the doctrine of evolution as a whole, he thought the Darwinians had been going too fast and too far in some of their speculative details.

He was strongly impressed by the "distinctiveness" of species, which he thought "bore no demonstrable relation to the particular environment in which they live."

Calls It Essential

On that part of evolution which has the greatest interest for the general reader, and which is the battle front of the "evolution war," viz.: its human aspect, Bateson had decided views, which strike into political and social fields.

He was deeply impressed by the "immense variability of the human stock." The reach of this is shown by a quotation given by Professor Morgan:

"How hard it is to believe the polymorphism of man. In no wild species, not even among the ants, do we find any polymorphism approaching to this. I never cease to marvel that the more divergent castes of civilized humanity are capable of interbreeding and producing fertile offspring from their crosses.

"Nothing but this paradoxical fact prevents us from regarding many classes of Englishmen as distinct species in the full sense of the term. The problem that confronts the political philosopher is to find a system by which these differentiated elements may combine together to form a co-ordinated community in which each element remains substantially contented with its lot."

On the basis of biological observation, Bateson even affirmed that while "democracy regards class distinction as evil, we perceive it to be essential."

ON "A DELICATE MATTER"

SHOULD WOMEN have Their faces LIFTED?
Well, of course,
It is a VERY delicate
Matter, and should Only be TOUCHED ON VERY LIGHTLY.
But the TRUTH seems To be that
The WOMEN who DESIRE
This treatment, THINK
So much of THEIR FACES
That it GETS ON THEIR MINDS.

There's a PLACE for EVERYTHING, and the place
For a WOMAN'S FACE
Is, naturally, SITTING on Her OWN NECK, or LYING on some NICE
MAN'S SHOULDER.
To LIFT ONE THING is To expose ANOTHER.
WHY aren't women afraid
OF THAT?

What they REALLY need!
